mile front with the capture of Giarre, Riposto and Milo, all 16 miles north of Catania.

Riposto lies on the coast and Giarre and Milo are on a line due west up the slopes of Mt. Etna.

"We continued our advance in all sectors yesterday, making considerable progress in the center," Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique said.

The communique reported that the Allies were "steadily pushing" enemy rearguards east from Randazzo, whose capture by the Americans yesterday unhinged the Axis line and split the defenders into two columns racing desperately for Messina and a chance to escape to the Italian mainland.

The thrust through Randazzo left the Axis command in a situation paralleling that in Tunisia following the capture of Tunis and Bizerte, observers said.

With the Seventh army already in possession of both Randazzo and Naso on the north coast, Germans still holding out in the mountains along a road between the two points were trapped.

The bulk of the Randazzo garrison was believed fleeing over a tortuous, winding road toward the north coast town of Barcellona, 18 miles west of Messina, or eastward toward Taormina, 28 miles south of Messina.

Allied advances along both coast roads may close these avenues of escape for the troops in the mountainous interior. The Americans at last reports were some 20 air miles from Barcellona, while the British Eighth army was only a few miles from Fiumefreddo, some six miles below Taormina.

The evacuation of Axis troops from Messina across a two-mile-wide strait to the Italian mainland was proceeding at a quickening tempo under what was described in front dispatches as the world's fiercest anti-aircraft concentration.

The capture of Randazzo reduced the Axis front from the north to the east coasts to a mere 30 miles and gave the Allies control of three quarters of the circumference of Mt. Etna.

CALLS LEADERS ON PATRONAGE

Ferguson Plans New Protest Over Federal Jobs.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson announced today a meeting of party leaders would be held here, probably Sept. 15, to discuss federal patronage problems.

It will be the second such meeting. Ferguson called the first last May and demanded that Darrell Jones, state executive committee chairman, obtain a greater number of jobs.

The September meeting, he added, "will ignore" Jones and draft a protest directly to Washington.

TRACES ANEMIA TO FATTY FOODS

CHICAGO—(INS)—Indications that anemia may be caused by eating fatty foods were reported recently by Dr. Joan Longini, research assistant in physiology at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Longini, through experiments with the blood of dogs, found that fatty acids quickly break down red blood cells. A fat meal, she noted, may increase the destruction of these cells by more than 50 per cent.

By comparison, experiments showed that resistance to cell breakdown actually was increased after a meal of proteins or sugar.

Air War Veteran and Only 16

SIXTEEN YEARS OLD and a veteran of 21 combat missions is the record of Staff Sergt. Clifford R. Wherley of Elmwood, Ill. The youthful turret gunner of a Marauder bomber was sent back to the United States from North Africa when his age was discovered. that the state would do everything possible to remove causes which had created the situation in Cleveland.

"Nobody recognizes more than I do the state need for additional hospitals and penal buildings," Bricker said when asked about state plans for psychopathic offenders.

'Seriousness of the problem is fully recognized and it is being given every consideration by the welfare department authorities who are trying to overlook nothing in their efforts to solve it," Bricker added.

Hagert, who will be 17 next month, was committed to the Boys Industrial school at Lancaster in December of 1941 for automobile theft and served 11 months.

The Collins twins left their home Thursday to go to the Lakewood golf course in Westlake Village where they usually caddied. They never arrived.

Hagert said he picked the boys up in his automobile, police said, as they sought a ride to the course. He confessed shooting both in the head with a .32 caliber revolver.

The youth admitted kidnaping young Buchanan Wednesday as the boy was on his way to Lakewood park. The boy was found in Westlake field, bleeding, beaten and criminally attacked on Thursday after his parents received three calls from an anonymous telephone caller who advised where the boy could be found.

A newspaper reporter's tip led to the arrest for questioning of young Hagert. The reporter noticed the youth was intensely interested and was one of the bystanders when young Buchanan was found in the Westlake field. He took the license tag number on the youth's automobile and turned it over to police.

Hagert was found to own a blue automobile similar to the one that young Buchanan had described was driven by the man who had picked him up in Lakewood and knocked him unconscious.

Hagert, described as "anti-social and anti-moral," was released from the psychopathic ward at City hospital Monday at the insistence of his mother, Mrs. Laura Hagert. Mrs. Hagert brought her son to the hospital five weeks earlier for observation and he was released at her insistence before the usual 90-day observation period had expired.

Detective Capt. Herbert Murray said the attack upon the 13-year-old boy occurred two months ago, but had not been reported because Hagert said he had given the boy "$1 to keep quiet."

Murray said the name of the boy was found written on a slip of paper found in Hagert's wallet. Hagert confessed to the attack, Murray said, when confronted by the boy.

Police Chief George W. Matowitz ordered all officers to submit to him a list of known perverts and sex offenders and to begin an immediate check on their activities.

Filing of formal charges against Hagert may be delayed until questioning of the youth is completed, police said. A complaint will have to be filed through juvenile court because he will not be 18 until next month.

SIX YEAR-OLDS READ PAPERS

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Two six-year-old youngsters—Bobby Wissel and Johnny Valanti—stared around the police station charge room to which they had been taken after having made a swimming pool of the decorative fountain in front of the swank Savoy-Plaza hotel.

Police Lt. John Plazza looked down from his high desk and eyed the dripping boys severely. He cleared his throat, but before he could say a word, Johnny, who apparently reads the papers and knows how cops are supposed to treat little boys, asked:

"Don't we get any ice cream?"

Piazza hesitated, and then threw up his hands and grinned. He bought them some ice cream. Bobby's dad came along in a few minutes and took the boys home.

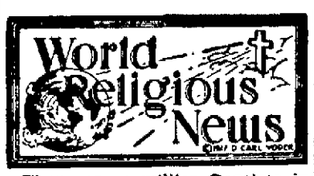
In the Western Christian Advocate of recent date this statement occurred: "I need to recognize that I owe many of the values of life and civilization to the work which the church has done. Such things as the sanctity of marriage, the stability of the home, the fact of education, respect for other personalities, and countless other values I take for granted, have been developed and made real because of the teaching and training of the church and its agencies for centuries. These things are my heritage and I owe most of them to the church."

Why not accept the invitation to COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

—D. Carl Yoder.



There are a million Baptists in Soviet Russia.

Members of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States contributed $204,536 for missions in 1942.

The Church of England has given the United States a church and adjoining lands in the Valley of the Macqueripe in Trinidad, the U. S. Navy Department has announced.

The restriction on Bulgarian Jews has been tightened. Four ghettoes have been established and deportations to Poland are planned.

The Protestant Episcopal diocese of Ohio has petitioned congress that "the religious conscience of America be adequately represented on the United States delegation at the peace table following the war."

The State Department has announced that the United States Government has proposed that an Anglo-American conference be held in Ottawa to study means of saving European Jews doomed to extinction by Nazi Germany.

Copies of the Scriptures were printed and distributed by American Bible Society in 1942 at the rate of 11,000 a day, making the greatest year in A. B. S. history . . . The war did that, for thousands of those Scriptures went to Army and Navy personnel; even a war-wind blows somebody good . . . Roman Catholic membership shows an increase of 389,005 over last year.

Believing that the end of World War II will bring a great demand for new and well-trained missionaries in every part of the world, the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist church is now seeking more than 50 young men and women for immediate service within the next few years.

Through the influence of General Hershey representatives of the American Association of Theological Schools and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America have recommended measures for enabling students for the ministry to complete their theological training without interruption by the war.

One of the finest arts is to grow an increasingly sweeter disposition. A business man in an Iowa town wrote regarding a retired aged minister, "The city of Clarinda could well afford to pay him a salary, if thereby we could keep this man of God in our community, just to walk up and down our streets." It is said that when Phillip Brooks walked down the street that the people in the stores went to the front doors and windows to see him pass.

Some one has half-facetiously described a minister as one who is to have the wisdom of a scholar, the logic of a lawyer, the peripatetic energy of a family doctor, the wizardry of a financier, the sense of rhythm of a poet, the imagination of an artist, the endurance of a horse, the sanctity of a saint, and all of this for the salary of an apartment janitor.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—save tires and gasoline by observing 35-mile speed limit.

Hay fever victims need no reminder that this is the calendar date for start-off of this malady.

One geologist foresees glaciers again descending on the earth in about a million years from now—which wouldn't be in time for that much-talked-about "cooling off" period.

No Ceiling On Fresh Peaches

PEACHES, which rate high among delicious fruits, become a luxury item this season—priced by the piece or by the pound, rather than by the bushel.

But if you were to ask the price of a bushel—expecting to hear "$2" or "$2.50"—it would probably be something of a shock to learn that a bushel would set you back from $6 to $10.

The ceiling-setters, it appears, have done nothing about peach prices—nor do they intend to. The OPA regional chief explains, "The OPA has given up any attempt to try to set prices for peaches this year. The primary reason is that the crop is less than 25 per cent of normal in most areas, while the entire crop will run only 40 to 50 per cent of normal. . . . To enable producers to get anywhere near their costs out of the crop there will be no ceiling on fresh peaches."

This marks a departure from the rationing idea of establishing ceiling prices and equalizing distribution of scarce commodities. The present theory, as applied to farm products, seems to sanction as large a money return from a small crop as from a large one.

So there'll be "no peaches for canning," except for those whose income has jumped in proportion to price increases.

Causes of Detroit Outbreak

STUDY is being made all over the country of the report of the Michigan governor's fact-finding committee in connection with the tragic race riots in Detroit last June.

One point that seems to stand out clearly is that the rioting did not involve any of the intelligent, responsible, established residents of Detroit, either white or colored, and that it was irresponsible white and colored youths, mostly newcomers to the city, who instigated the orgy of lawlessness and were responsible for practically all of the casualties and property damage.

Investigators found no evidence of subversive activity by enemy agents, nor of premeditated violence, and agreed that "no explanation is admissible other than utter spontaneity."

It is such "utter spontaneity," unhibited by respect for law or civilizing influences, that accounts for mob violence and other exhibitions of disregard for requirements of orderly government.

It may be hoped that thoughtful consideration of such recent occurrences as those in Detroit, New York and other populous centers, will inspire responsible leadership throughout the country to concentrate efforts on controlling those elements in each community which are either actual or potential disturbers of the public peace.

Discussing Postmaster Aspirants

MORE public interest, it appears, is being displayed in the matter of who is to be Mansfield's next postmaster than in the political campaign that is moving along in a quiet sort of way toward the November election without intervention of the customary primaries.

Announcement of the names of eight aspirants for the postmastership brings discussion of the qualifications, suitability and record of each and impresses the fact that this is the highest federally appointive local position, and that it has become a life-time civil service appointment, rather than for a four-year presidential term, as formerly.

While no examination is required, other than information disclosed in the application, it is noted that civil service commission investigators are charged with responsibility to inquire into the suitability, experience, fitness for the office, reputation and personal characteristics of each of the applicants.

Mansfield has been fortunate, for many years, in the quality of men who have served in the responsible position of postmaster. It may be hoped that this record will continue.

Disappointed Highjacker

SAD is the story of the man who highjacked five tons of coffee from a freight truck. He thought he was starting one of those marches into big money which distinguished the prohibition era. But alas, the rationing dropped off the coffee and the bottom dropped out of the coffee black market and there was the highjacker with five tons of coffee, only a little of which he was able to sell at low prices to merchants who were persuaded that the sale was legitimate.

The big money was nowhere, police are on his trail and the shadow of jail is cast across his path. The highjacker is too late. He should learn that that kind of thing went out of public favor a long time ago.

The public, confused at first by shortages, went in for black markets. But slowly people are getting their bearings in this new field of morals. Conscience begins to take hold. As they realize the evil which black markets do their country, they abandon them.

Brooms Lose 'Non-Functional Frills'

THE WAR PRODUCTION BOARD says the housewife may buy a broom. So may the carpenter, who agrees to leave the scene of his labor "broom-clean." So may the janitor and all the rest of the folk who buy brooms. But it must be very plain, stripped of all "non-functional frills."

There must be no extra winding of steel wire for appearance's sake; no little hole in the top with a metal ring to hang the broom up by. The handle must be "no longer than necessary" and must be without benefit of lacquer.

Now that Mae West has been divorced from the husband she denied having married, she complains that she was "misunderstood"—but doesn't reveal what she really intended to say.

It is being noted that one of the more noisome perfumes is now being used as an insect repellant—which seems to give it a more proper field.

Wives who have not already "driven their husband to drink" are asked to delay the process until the present shortage has been overcome.

Brighter Outlook for Early End Of European Phases of the War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE GODS OF WAR certainly are smiling on the great and going concern of Roosevelt, Churchill and company, as the senior partners prepare to begin what probably are their most important conversations since the first historic conference on the Atlantic in the parlous days of '41.

That is to say, things military are going exceedingly well. There are great international political problems to plague the chiefs, but the matter of immediate concern presumably is where and when the Anglo-American Allies can best swarm aboard the European continent and capitalize the successes of the Red armies before opportunity takes a nose-dive.

Things could scarcely be going better on the two land fronts and the one air front of the European theater. That certainly should facilitate the difficult decision the president and Britain's prime minister must make.

On the crucial Russian front there has been no slackening in the Red offensive which threatens to force the Huns to withdraw their entire thousand-mile battleline. With the key positions of Orel and Belgorod already well behind the advancing Soviet front, the great fortified railway center of Kharkov, still farther south, is threatened with encirclement, and the Muscovites are virtually at the gates of the beleaguered city.

The Nazis are in a precarious position. Thus far there's no indication that the Reds are weakening in the striking power necessary to permit continuation of their drive to crack the German line and precipitate a rout.

Should the Russian assault lose steam before the western Allies are able to take major action to divert further Nazi strength from the eastern front, then the opportunity for a quick Allied coup de grace might be swallowed up in the bad weather of autumn, and the war would be protracted. That's a contingency the conference between Messrs Roosevelt and Churchill is calculated to meet.

In Sicily the end of Axis resistance is very near. Already the fiercely fighting Germans are admitting defeat by the withdrawal of troops across the narrow strait of Messina to the mainland. They are pulling out in small craft under a canopy of anti-aircraft fire to ward off the ceaseless attack by Allied war planes which are taking a bloody toll.

EVEN more encouraging than the Sicilian success is the status of the Anglo-American aerial bombardment of western Europe and Germany. That assault, unprecedented in its terrific force, has as its purpose the reduction of the reich to impotence by destruction of its war industries, supply centers, naval bases and land communications of all sorts.

So thorough has been the devastation among the Nazi war industries of western Europe that London tells us an end has been put to the steady flow of Hitler's basic materials. The great American and British bombers therefore are able to turn part of their attention to centers manufacturing consumer goods, like the famous and ancient city of Nuremberg. The purpose of that, of course, is to hit the morale of the civilian population.

One of the essentials for invasion of western Europe was destruction of the main sources of Hitler's war supplies. London's statement indicates that the air navies have wrought so well that the fuehrer now must be feeding heavily off the resources which he had stored away before the round-the-clock bombing started.

So by and large, the Allied chiefs should be pleased with the set-up as they sit down at the conference table.

Listen World! By ELSIE ROBINSON

Youthful Cain-Raisers

I AM READING with great interest the reports from multiple committees who are now trying to eliminate our juvenile delinquency problem. Kids are where I live. I place my bets on them every time. But I'll frankly admit that they can be a considerable pain in the neck.

As for this modern breed I doubt if they're worse than we would have been at their age if given the same high, wide and handsome chances to raise Cain. And if they defy our authority and sneer at our record you can hardly blame them. Just between us, grandpa, it ain't so hot. But how many of us are willing to admit it?

Whenever I view the embattled generation I always remember Mrs. Ed Jones who came to our town as a bride when I was a kid myself. Mrs. Ed was a large blond lady with a sharp yet reflective eye and a way of smiling out of the side of her mouth that mowed 'em down. Needless to say this did not increase her popularity with the Leading Ladies of the community.

From the day of her arrival Mrs. Ed was back fence news. The old folks blamed Ed bitterly for bringing her around. "Her past was no better than it should have been." I was too young to understand the spicy implication of this remark but even I could see that the woman was both an eyeful and a stick of dynamite. The truth was that she was an imported wild oat with a record that would give even some of our Hollywood experts the screaming meamies.

BUT time went on and Mrs. Ed had one baby then two and eventually five. Now, considering the woman's former interests, you might reasonably have expected that her house would be a den of iniquity and her babies equipped with hoofs and horns.

To the contrary, Mrs. Jones's menage was the cheeriest and best kept home in town and the Jones children were models! For, to the amazement of one and all, their mother ruled them with a rod of iron. Other little girls, including ye writer, might sneak out for an occasional "spooning party" or smoke cornsilk cigarets back of the barn with Tom, Dick and Harry. But not Eloise and Dorothea Jones. Never did children tread the straight and narrow path more conscientiously.

Yet if she was firm Ma Jones was also human. All the youngsters in the neighborhood were welcomed to her home. We could even play post-office in our youthful gambols, but nix on sneaking out for dubious work at the crossroads.

Mrs. Ed furnished one of the greatest moral lessons in my life. Whatever her youthful errors may have been—and they were doubtless plenty—when she settled down to the solid business of life there was no fooling. In all that smug and complacent frontier village no mother could surpass her as a solid citizen.

And I'm thinking now of these young hellions who are giving us such a headache. Yes, they're a hand full and we're bound to worry over them. But I don't worry too much. You can leave them very safely in the hands of Mother Nature.

Nine times out of ten the wild kid will be the staid adult. They are kicking up the muck now but you can bet your last penny that they will resurrect the good old woodshed technique when their own kids start helling around. It never fails.

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

WELL a little while ago we had potatoes spoiling by the carload because a government agency wouldn't permit icing, now it's the shrimp catch that's in danger of spoiling.

What are they doing with all the ice anyway? Shipping it to Iceland?

We tried to get the information out of an iceman and he just stood there picking his teeth with his tongs, smiling mysteriously and saying "wouldn't Hitler like to know?"

In New Orleans, supply boat crews marched on an ice plant and took over the whole production to ice up ten shrimp boats. That was the only way they could get ice.

It doesn't make any sense to us. Are they going to bomb Europe or freeze it?

* * *

Don't tell us they've given Ickes secret control over the ice ponds! He's too hot a boy to be running the ice industry.

Thought for the day: What this country needs is a good five cent piece of ice.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Step-Up In Allied Timetable Is Seen as Quebec Conference Aim

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

TIME and the tides of war wait for no nation.

As the full implications of the Fascist debacle and of developing Allied military superiority penetrated the consciousness of the free world, things began to happen fast.

Statesmen discovered it was later than they thought, that the pace of victory demanded new strategies.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill made his fourth trip of the war to North America. Only three months after his previous visit, it was again necessary for him to confer with President Roosevelt and Canadian leaders on important war questions.

The prime minister brought with him the minister of war transport, Lord Leathers, and the British chiefs of staff. Grand strategy clearly was in the air despite the announcement that Russian representatives were not expected to join the talks.

In 1918 the Allies stepped up their timetable to achieve a quicker victory, pushed ahead drives originally scheduled for the spring of 1919. Churchill's visit made observers wonder if the timetable for the promised all-out assault on the European continent might not be in for such revising.

Before seeing Mr. Churchill, President Roosevelt met with high U. S. military and state department advisers in the White House. Dr. Isaiah Bowman, chief American territorial expert at the Paris peace conference in 1919, was present with U. S. chiefs of staff. Bowman is an adviser of the state department, which is known to be preparing alternative plans to meet various possible foreign situations as they arise.

European Repercussions.

Meanwhile in Algiers the French Committee of National Liberation worked to achieve the fullest degree of unity, in preparation for recognition by the United States and Britain as the de facto governent of French interests overseas.

Sweden barred transport of German war material through Sweden to Norway and Finland. Traffic of German army men on furlough was scheduled to end August 20.

And a special radio message from the Allied high command asked Greek and Yugoslav patriots to "be patient a little while longer," hinted at imminent invasion.

At Home

Lafayette Rides Again.

While an American expeditionary force was crossing the Atlantic to invade North Africa, the U. S. S. Lafayette—greatest of U. S. transports—lay on her side in New York harbor. On Feb. 9, 1942, the former French superliner Normandie had caught fire and capsized while workmen were fitting her out for soldiers.

Square on the U. S. Navy fell the biggest salvaging job ever attempted.

Gradually the barnacle-encrusted hull righted itself according to plan. The weight of cement inside kept her off an even keel—but she was a ship again, her hull declared sound as ever.

Another 11 months, the navy estimated, would be needed to fit her for transport service. When ready she will carry as many men as "several" ordinary ships.

Vanishing Vehicles.

If there were any hitch-hikers on eastern U. S. highways in June this year they were passed by only 40 motor vehicles for every 100 they could have thumbed two years earlier. In the middle west and west, according to the public roads administration of the federal works agency, the drop in motor traffic has been slightly less; 57 cars last June for every 100 in 1941.

The reason why horses now may laugh at those who predicted the motor car had come to stay was revealed during the week by the salvage division of the war production board. Its figures showed that more than 4,000 cars a day are being removed from service, chiefly for lack of replacement parts. In the year ending last June nearly 1,500,000 were junked in the United States.

Meanwhile the 536,000 new cars available when production for civilian use was halted in February, 1942, have dwindled to 100,000 may be completely distributed by the end of the year.

Crisis In Brooklyn.

"Leave us go root for the Dodgers, Rodgers," was the national anthem of New York city's borough of Brooklyn (pop. 2,698,000).

"Dem Bums" had fallen from first place, almost out of the National league's first division. Out in the bleachers of Ebbets field the natives now chorus: "Leave us go root for the Bushwicks, Rodgers!" The Bushwicks being the borough's outstanding semi-pro team.

The losing streak of the Brooklyn Dodgers—whose only victories in one 12 game stretch were in non-league exhibition games—finally resulted in pickets demanding the return of First Baseman Dolph Camilli who was "sold" to the N. Y. Giants and then left baseball. Fans objected to the rehabilitation program of Branch Rickey, new Brooklyn president, though it was the same technique he used in making the St. Louis Cardinals world champions.

Abroad

Touchdown In Sicily.

With complete supremacy in the Sicilian skies and in full control of the waters around that rugged isle, Anglo-Canadian-American troops pressed Axis defenders steadily back toward Messina, into an ever-narrowing triangle.

British capture of strategic, toughly-defended Catania on the eastern coast brought the Eighth army up against Mt. Etna itself, towering anchor of the Axis' main line. To the north, American troops gave the inland key city, Troina, the heaviest shelling of the campaign, captured it after hard fighting.

Warships shelled the retreating enemy on coastal roads north and east. Planes bombed to rubble the interior town of Randazzo—"Razzle-dazzle" to Yank soldiers—and the Allies converged upon that last vital junction of Sicily's inland highways.

Germans at Bay.

While the Nazis continued their evacuation of 1,000,000 civilians from Berlin, British airmen punctured the grim warning of what was to come by thundering air attacks on the Ruhr and Rhineland. Mannerheim and Ludwigshafen were bombed for the 58th time after a four months' respite.

Official Germans did not attempt to conceal their apprehensions. Hamburg plus Rome foretold the most terrible blow of all—destruction of Berlin.

The Nazi regime was obviously shaken, Europe alive with rumors of momentous conferences in the German capital.

Nearer Rabaul.

The capture of Munda airfield by jungle-fighting Americans who used flame-throwers to overcome hidden Japanese gun pits brought Rabaul within range of U. S. fighter planes. This key enemy base, 450 miles to the northward, was seen as the Yanks' new major objective.

Seebee construction troops swiftly set to work preparing bomb-scarred Munda field for flights of daylight bombers and escorting ships as Vila airfield, only 17 miles northwest on Kolombangara island, loomed next on the agenda. Action was not long delayed.

Meanwhile the Allied air force pounded the Japanese seaplane base at Rekata bay, northeast of Munda. And at Bougainville, in the northern Solomons, 16 U. S. fighter planes attacked 30 Zeros, downed seven with a loss of one.

'Summer Stalingrad.'

For nearly a week the Nazi radio kept from the German people news of the fall of Belgorod. Occurring on the same day the Red army captured Orel, there was reason for the Hitlerites reticence.

Laid open to capture by the double Soviet triumph were two other German-held keys, Kharkov and Bryansk. Relentlessly the Red army pressed forward from Belgorod to encircle Kharkov, Russia's third-largest city, which it held briefly last winter. So precipitate was the Nazi retreat in this sector that Russians were able to capture 212 German tanks, including 15 mammoth Tigers in perfect working order.

Even the main anchor of the Germans, central defenses was threatened by the fast-developing Red summer offensive as a partial evacuation of long-held Smolensk, 220 miles west of Moscow, appeared to be underway.

Quotes

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey: "I can't make any predictions about fathers or essential workers. You tell me what the situation in Europe, in Russia and in the Pacific will be in two weeks or a month and I'll tell you how the draft will be working."

Rep. Harold D. Cooley, Democrat, North Carolina, chairman committee investigating Farm Security administration and alleged establishment of collective farms: "Some one had a dream back in 1935 and designed a rainbow. We are trying to find its end but it's so complicated I doubt if we ever will."

In Short

Upheld: In Washington by the war labor board, the privilege of workers to wear union insignia while canning soup.

Killed: By Rome police when her husband failed to stop his car, the wife of the first secretary of the Turkish embassy.

Married: At Algiers, Capt. Henry Giraud, son of the French commander-in-chief, and the daughter of a North African colonial family.

Dave Boone Says:

THE GROWING impression that there's some pretty slack inspection in war plants that costs many human lives is increased by the finding of a committee that "faulty manufacture by a sub-contractor, faulty inspection by the prime manufacturer and inadequate inspection procedures" caused that glider tragedy in St. Louis.

That anybody could chisel on the vital parts of any war implement, and that on top of that the inspectors could let the defects go through, seems unthinkable. Yet that seems to be what is happening.

The thickness of the struts on the St. Louis glider were far below the requirements called for, yet it took ten deaths to discover it. No sabotage? Why aren't careless inspectors just as guilty of sabotage as enemy plotters?

I see where Alfred P. Sloan, jr., says that what business needs most is a return to "sea-level planning" instead of "stratosphere planning." Say, Alfred, if some of the planners ever saw sea level they would think it was a mirage.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Aviary, please!"

A Farmer's Diary By CALVIN A. BYERS

'Incentive Pay'

WILD blackberries are ripe upon the hills. But, as with other fruits this year the supply is limited. Too much rain came at pollinating time and all the white-petaled blossoms with their cone-like centers were not fertilized. The result was imperfectly filled berries.

The morning woods are wet. Brambles are high and threatening. But berries were ripe and we wanted them, not to sell, but to can for winter.

Three different times our older boys went out and brought in a few—but with lagging interest. They had seen a snake; they had found a hornet's nest beneath one bush, and almost been stung; the briers were terrible.

On the fourth day I made all four a proposition. I said I would give them a small sum of money for each quart of berries canned and on the cupboard shelf. When the two older boys pointed to the half dozen quarts they had already brought in, I dived into my pocket for shekles to square things with. The next evening they had picked a ten-quart pail full. Eight shining jars were on the shelf.

"What about snakes and hornets and briers today?" I wondered.

"Snakes run," said the 8-year-old gravely, "and hornets don't bother if you let them alone, and we wore long pants and our high winter boots so the briers couldn't scratch our shins.

"We started out early," explained his brother. "It was so nice in the woods that you ought to have been along. There were lacy white flowers all over the slope, higher than our heads—and the water touch-me-nots were in bloom, at the water hole, on top of the hill. We found some ripe berries that nobody had even seen before, and we crawled under the canes and let them fall into our pail. A turtle dove kept calling. We saw where the cows go to spend the hot part of the day . . . it's a very nice place with a wonderful view. We chewed some wheat grains and made chewing gum and we went along by the wheat field and before we came home we went down to the spring in the woods where the water is always so cold, and had a good drink."

I nodded, satisfied. I am sure I know what will be remembered best and longest about today. The feel of a coin? No—the intangible fragrance of summer woods, the call of the dove, the pride of accomplishment, and the drink of good spring water.

CHAPTER XXVI

If Toby did not come back, Meegan thought, she could see herself walking down to the church and seeing Erica and telling her that Toby had left and had not come back and was never coming back. She could see Erica's slight body stiffen as understanding came quickly to her . . . understanding and hate and hurt. There had been so much hate this summer in people capable of generous love . . . She could see Helen's open face marked with surprise and Roy's quiet embarrassment . . . To Dr. Childs, the clergyman beloved by all, a big, handsome, silver-haired man, Toby's failure to come back would be as a blight upon his church . . . Then they would be quiet with the maddening quietness of people who have been shocked and hurt beyond speech . . . and once more Erica would belong nowhere . . .

She turned from the window and went to the coffee table and found a cigaret and lighted it. She smoked a little and put it out. It tasted stale or perhaps she had lost her taste for cigarets... She could see the house where Erica lived alive with excitement now . . . She could see Helen trying to subdue her frivolous, too-blond curls as well as the high spirits of her children. She could hear Helen shouting last-minute instructions to the maids in her loud clear voice . . . And Roy looking at his watch and Erica sitting at the dressing table looking at the suit she had bought on her first trip to New York a week ago with Helen . . . Perhaps the children were running in and out of the room asking questions . . . It was a merry household as any place that Helen lived would be boisterous and merry . . .

She walked to the window again, her eyes beginning to hurt from the intensity of looking down the road. Then she saw a car, a mere speck at first, loom larger and larger as the old motor began to be audible.

Her mother would never know with what infinite relief she said, "Toby's coming."

"Then we won't be late," her mother said, putting her knitting in her knitting-bag. "I think I'll go up and touch up my face again, dear. In this weather powder won't stay on. Do you need anything from upstairs?"

"No, nothing, thanks."

"I'll only be a moment. I knew Toby would be back on time."

Meegan was standing by the window when Toby came in and smiled at her.

"Got held up," he said. Then, "You didn't tell Mother we knew she had talked?"

"No."

"Good. No need to disturb her. The damage has been done. How is she?"

"Fine. She went upstairs to powder her nose."

He grinned. "No one will see her nose. You're nervous. What are you nervous about? You're not getting married."

"I . . . I was afraid you wouldn't get back . . . on time."

"And keep my bride waiting at the church? I wonder how Erica feels. Funny, when I think that I'll be with her for the rest of my life, with one girl for the rest of my life . . . I'm not leaving Mother exclusively to you, you know. I mean she's not to be a handicap or a burden. When you want to get married, we'll share her. I want to be emphatic about that. Should have mentioned it before." He grinned again. "You know, there's something about getting married that's comparable to making your last will and testament . . . Skip it. . . . I have the jitters. . . . I'd like a drink but I suppose I'll skip that, too . . ."

Meegan said, "I hope you and Erica will be very happy, Toby . . . very happy. . . . I've said this before, I remember, but I believe in it so much . . . that love is the one thing that can and must be honest and beautiful. If I were being married, I'd bring nothing out of the past into my marriage. It would be a beginning as new as being born."

He looked at her soberly. When he heard his mother coming down the steps he went into the hall and said, "I knew I'd have to wait for you!"

The sun was shining through the stained glass windows of the little church in which Clare and Fayne had been married in which Sue and Van had been married and in which most of the people of her generation had been married. The wedding today was perhaps one of the smallest and simplest but to her the most touching. Looking on were only her mother and Helen's children with a maid and she. Her mother was visibly trembling and the maid held tightly to the hands of the children and she, Meegan, had the terrible sensation that if she turned her head, she would find Clare in the church . . .

She did not turn her head and the terrible sensation came and went intermittently replaced by the comforting one of seeing Erica and Toby married and listening to the same words that had been said over Clare and Fayne and Sue and Van being said again by the same resonant voice over Erica and Toby. They had been said so many, many times before, those same words, without losing their appeal and dignity and inspiration. It mattered so little that Erica wore not the conventional white but a navy suit with a fuschia blouse and a small navy hat from which her hair flowed to her shoulder. What did matter enormously was that Erica looked lovely and cool and competent as she lifted her face for Toby to kiss her. . . . Erica belonged now. She belonged looking lovely and cool and competent for Toby.

Slowly as the organ played Meegan turned her head, her eyes appreheisive as they scanned the empty pews. But Clare was not in the church . . . Clare had not come . . . Except for the two families and the clergyman and the maid the church was quite empty.

She kissed Erica's cheek, saw her smiling mouth, her happy eyes, the narrow platinum band on her finger. She turned to Toby and kissed him and felt his firm embrace. He looked as he always looked when he was happy . . . cheeks flushed, eyes dark and bright with excitement, his shoulders sloping more than usual because he was not thinking about it. He said little. Indeed he had little opportunity to speak. His mother and Helen, the latter rosy with excitement, kept up a steady stream of unimportant but pleasant conversation.

In the house fresh flowers were everywhere. Standing around the festive table where Erica was putting a knife into her wedding cake Meegan was thinking how lost the activities of the island were to her today. When Toby put his hand across Erica's to help her cut the cake. Meegan's eyes met Roy's and his were less those of a stranger. She wished then that she could tell him that her father would have liked him for the skill of his hands and his love for his family.

"You'll have to bring your mother out to our farm," he said.

"We'd love to come."

Helen turned to her. "You won't know me when you see me out there, Meegan. I was raised on a farm. Milking a cow is nothing new to me. And the kids are thrilled! We've promised them ponies and if I haven't gotten too fat, I can still ride a horse. I was raised riding 'em bareback. We thought saddles were for sissies."

Elinor McLean turned her head. "Oh, you are a horsewoman, my dear."

Helen laughed. "Why, yes, I guess you could call me that but we called it work in those days. We used to ride 'em back from the pasture and sometimes we rode to school."

"Meegan adores riding."

Roy said, "I was just telling Meegan we'd like you and her to come out to the farm."

"Oh, thank you. We'd adore to come. My husband always wanted a large country place. I used to ride quite a lot in Virginia . . . fox hunting, you know. We were much more formal then about our sports."

"I never thought I'd want to go back on a farm," Helen said. "I was so glad to get away from it when I came to the city I hoped I'd never see one again. But when Roy took me out to see this place and I saw the stuff ready for harvest, it got in my blood again. I guess I'm just a farmer's daughter, after all. I wanted to roll up my sleeves and go out in the field and help with the corn. One thing when you have a farm you don't have to worry about getting something to eat. My father never made any money but he never had to worry about the price of tomatoes. If the war comes and things get bad, I'll know my kids will eat and we can probably help other kids to eat."

Toby said, "They are leaving us out entirely, Erica. I don't think they'll miss us if we leave."

Erica said, "Will you come upstairs with me, Meegan?"

She was alone with Erica only a few minutes in her bedroom.

Erica said, "I wanted to say something to you, but I can't find the right words. I'll be good to Toby . . ."

"Good to him and for him."

"I won't try to change him. I married a man whose face I slapped the first time I saw him. The first day I saw you after you left this house I said, 'Everything is easy for her.' I didn't know what I was talking about. You took your father's place. Toby should have and didn't. Your mother couldn't."

Meegan said, "You belong now, you know."

"On the island? No, and it doesn't matter. I belong to Toby."

They stood on the steps throwing rice until the path and the lawn were covered as with snow. Presently the car, Erica's car with Toby driving, pulled away. Meegan watched it as far as she could. She watched it safely beyond Clare's house and across the bridge to the mainland.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

NORMAL CHERRY FROM HEALTHY TREE
LEAF SPOT CAUSES DEFOLIATION OF CHERRY TREES
DWARFED CHERRY FROM DISEASED DEFOLIATED TREE

Keep An Eye on Cherry Trees In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

If you have one or two sweet and sour cherry trees in your home orchard and the leaves have turned yellow and fallen early, especially those on the sour cherry trees, you can suspect a disease known as yellow leaf or cherry leaf spot.

The three outstanding diseases on cherries are brown-rot, yellow leaf and black-knot.

The brown-rot attacks the fruit after it has begun to ripen. The fruit decays and is covered with a gray mold. When the affected fruit drops to the ground and is not gathered up and destroyed, the fungus causing the disease remains alive until spring, when it produces a large number of spores which float upward and finally infect the new crop. The blossoms may be blighted, the fruit rotted and the leaves affected. The fungus spreads rapidly in wet weather during the summer.

The yellow leaf of cherry causes defoliation, after the leaves have become spotted, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. This loss of foliage not only weakens the tree so that it may winter-kill, but it also reduces the number of fruit buds for the following year. The yellowed, fallen leaves should be cleaned up from the ground and burned, otherwise the fungus which causes the disease will survive the winter in the old leaves and spores in the spring will infect the new foliage.

Black-knot is a fungus disease which occurs on cherry trees which have been neglected for some time, and affects only the woody parts.

Lime-sulphur or Bordeaux sprays are recommended for cherry diseases but should be used carefully else the foliage will be burned and fruit dwarfed, as illustrated.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Class Health System Credited With Quarter Century of Service

F. D. Stotler Operates Local Unit at West Third Address.

There are number of so-called beneficial health methods now available to ill persons which only partially value the importance of clearing the blood stream through various bath processes, but none have scientifically accomplished the essentials like the Class Vapo Path Baths.

This service is made available to Richland countians through the establishment, 16 years ago, of the Class Bath Parlors at 144 West Third street, under the capable management of F. D. Stotler.

The lengthening list of satisfied patients and the continued growth of Mr. Stotler's business is adequate proof of its success here.

For years the discoverer of John F. Class-Vapo Path worked to find some way of combining the essential elements of Nature in such a way that they might be applied to the body under natural conditions, through the lungs and the pores of the skin. After years of painstaking research this was discovered and thus the John F. Class Vapo-Path system evolved. From a modest start 25 years ago this institution has grown to an international organization on results alone.

"The minerals and oils used in the John F. Class Vapo-Path contain the principle elements of the human body," Stotler states. "The fumes from these minerals and oils are released upon the body at a temperature below normal blood temperature causing the pores of the skin to be opened, causing elimination of poison and assimilation of nature's elements with beneficial results."

"The body," Stotler explains, "being enveloped in these fumes, greedily takes up through the pores of the skin and feeds to the body the elements which it needs. The formerly lacking materials which the body absorbs from the fumes sweep impurities from the system and return to health is the result."

"John F. Class Vapo-Path," Stotler continues, "is a health service rendered by applying mineral vapor fumes to the human body and into the blood with great curative effect and for the relief of many human ailments and disorders."

"This health service is rendered by placing the patient in a cabinet while the entire body in enveloped in rich Mineral Vapor Fumes, when necessary there are special appliances for the arms, legs, neck, head and throat, or any part of the body where pain is localized. The Hal-A-Fum, a patented device, is especially effective for the respiratory organs, the fumes being inhaled directly into the lungs and through them, nourish the blood and body tissues."

Mr. Stotler explains that Class Baths are beneficial, too, to well persons, particularly in these days of war-taut nerves when health means efficiency on the home front. Proper elimination, he says, through the pores, the absorption of John F. Class health minerals and the resulting improved circulation aid in regaining or in maintaining good health.

Hay fever victims, as well as sufferers from recurring summer colds will find the Class Baths of special benefit, Stotler states.

The Class Bath Parlors at 144 West Third street, have cabinets and appliances in sufficient number to treat promptly and properly any case taken into Mr. Stotler's care. The surroundings are clean, sanitary and restful. Trained, courteous attendants with a sympathetic understanding of conditions give individual care to each patient.

Mr. Stotler invites you to visit the Class Bath Parlors and see the method in operation. Operators there will be happy to explain this system of Nature's way to health. Or a telephone call or letter will bring a Class Bath representative to you.

While appointments are not always necessary, if convenient a previous appointment will assure your being taken care of without waiting.

METAL SCARCITY RESULTS IN NEW PRODUCT

Ingenuity of Peter Watson Studios Displayed In Unusual Plaques.

A modern wartime example of the old adage "Necessity is the mother of invention" may be found in the interesting new plaques just added to the Hostess China Shop's unique display of wall decorations.

Some months ago when the management of the noted Peter Watson Studios found that the priority on metal made it impossible to continue the production of frames for their pictures, they looked around for substitutes and found it in the clock faces which were not being used by an alarm clock manufacturer also because metal for the remaining parts of the clocks was not available.

The two manufacturers combined their resources to make a striking type of wall plaque which uses the colorful London scenes typical of the work of the Peter Watson Studios combined with a convex glass cover once used for the faces of alarm clocks.

The result is pleasing indeed . . another successful result of wartime ingenuity applied to the merchandising field.

This type of glass face is also used on an amusing variety of nursery rhyme and thermometer plaques which use the Walt Disney characters as subjects for clever sketches.

There's a story, too, behind the "Honey Comb Candles" that are new at the Hostess China Shop, 4 South Park. These sweet scented candles represent the untiring efforts of thousands of bees, flying over miles of meadows and wooded vales to bring to your table the finest of all candles . . . pure beeswax "Honey Comb Candles," made from this natural product of bees, broken bits of which are melted up to be remade into this unusual product.

In addition to the delightful aroma given off by these candles, they are unique in that they will not bend over even in the hottest of weather and are smokeless. They are produced by the A. I. Root company of Medina, workers in beeswax for over sixty years, and sold in Mansfield at the Hostess China Shop.

COTTAGE CLUB GIVES PARTY FOR JUNIORS

Picnic and Varied Program Held at South Park Friday In Charge of Mrs. O. F. Shively and Mrs. A. C. Tuttle.

COTTAGE GARDEN CLUB members, who sponsor the Junior Garden club, entertained their young guests Friday with a picnic at noon at South Park. Mrs. O. F. Shively and Mrs. A. C. Tuttle were hostesses for the occasion which was attended by 22 Cottage members and seven juniors.

Vegetables in a large wooden bowl formed an unusual centerpiece for the long table. Garlands of ageratum and marigolds were placed at either end of the centerpiece.

During the afternoon the junior members displayed their scrap books which were judged by the senior group. Barbara Jordan won the first prize. The young women also exhibited clever arrangements of vegetables, such as small victory gardens, and other miniature scenes.

Marilynn Graham, vice president of the juniors, presided, and introduced the younger group, who were dressed in costumes they had made. Barbara Blahnik was attired as corn; Barbara Jordan, daisy; Carol Massa, rose; Ann Shawber, eggp'ant; Marilyn Triesch, carrot; Marylynn Graham turnip; and Sarah Scott, tomato. Mrs. Scott won the prize for the best costume.

Later a quiz program was presented for the Cottage members in charge of the junior advisor, Miss Florence Gernhardt. Mrs. F. F. Forshee presented a paper on "Bulbs to Plant in Combination with Other Flowers in the Spring Garden."

Miss Gernhardt will entertain Cottage members at her home, Sloane avenue, on Aug. 27. Mrs. J. H. Petree will be the associate hostess. At that time Mrs. H. J. Paulsen will be the guest speaker, using as her topic, "Flower Arrangements in the Home."

WEEKLEY WINS $500 DAMAGES

Jury Returns Verdict For Former Butler School Head In Slander Case.

Weekley and Reed sympathizers, were awaiting the decision when the jury returned to the courtroom. Nearly all of them had attended trial sessions during the entire five days.

The jury took their seats and Judge Kalbfleisch asked, "have you reached a verdict?"

"Yes," replied C. M. Crafton, the foreman, and gave the judge the written verdict which he then read to the court.

There was little demonstration in the courtroom following the reading of the decision that "the jury find upon issues in this case in favor of the plaintiff and assesses the amount of the recover due to the plaintiff from the defendant at the sum of $500."

Smiling, Weekley shook hands with the jurors, expressing his gratitude to them for their decision. He said the decision of this case would be the basis for his re-entry into school work in Ohio. At present he is employed in the personnel department at Goodyear Aircraft company in Akron.

The verdict in favor of Weekley imposes on Dr. Reed the court costs in the case estimated at $250 to $300.

More than 50 witnesses were subpoenaed for the trial which opened Monday and nearly 45 testified. The courtroom was filled to overflowing during the entire trial as partisans of the bitter Butler school fight waited to learn which side won the decision.

Basis of Weekley's suit against Dr. Reed was his claim that the doctor had accused him of having syphilis when such was not the case, and that the doctor's charges had caused him mental and physical anguish and damage to his reputation.

Still pending are two other slander suits each for $10,000 brought by Weekley against Ira S. George, Butler business man, and Norman J. Stuckey, resident of that community.

Weekley's attorneys today were hopeful, in view of the decision of the Weekley-Reed case, that the other two defendants would settle out of court. However, L. H. Beam one of the attorneys representing Dr. Reed, is also retained by George and Stuckey, said he entertained no such idea.

It appeared today that if not settled out of court, these suits would be continued until the September jury term.

Richard Does His Duty But Hopes He Will Earn a Pet

Lots of heroes never get decorations for their courageous deeds and young Richard McNitt, 139 South Main street, is one of them.

Today he summoned all his courage and walked to the sheriff's office with two dogs trailing him.

"I found these two dogs," he told the deputies, indicating the black cocker and brindle Boston bull following him, "and I suppose they belong to someone. Maybe you can find out who. But, gee, I hope whoever claims them will let me keep the bull dog. I kinda like him."

The deputies told him to take the dogs back home and wait until someone claimed them. He left happy. He hadn't really wanted to tell them about the dogs but he knew it was the thing to do. But he has both dogs for a while at least, and maybe someone will let him keep the bull dog.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky propelled me into the hall with one hand while with the other he lifted his small whistle to his lips. The three guards whom he had summoned before in this way appeared at the doors of their rooms, an dhe spoke quickly.

"Listen for the telephone in your rooms. If the operator says 'Okay,' you, Smithers, walk downstairs one flight, and stand near the elevator. You, Jenkins, go upstairs one flight and do the same thing. You, Watkins, stay where you are, ready to rush out if the maid yells 'Help!' Jenkins, after five minutes, you get in the elevator, and ride up and down till the woman gets in, or I tell you to stop. Smithers, after five minutes you keep ringing the elevator. When it stops, get in if the woman's in the car. Otherwise, stay on the floor until she comes along. And when you get downstairs, keep her in sight until you can pass the office to the men who are to trail her. Then come up and report to me. Got it?"

All Know Their Roles.

"Yes," they chorused softly.

"Then get back and close your doors—all except Watkins, who stays on guard here."

His luck was good or his timing was perfect—I did not know which—for the doors had scarcely closed before the elevator stopped at the 17th floor, and Ruth Hayes, with elation written all over her, strode toward 1720, throwing me only a cursory glance as she passed.

Smug satisfaction in what she evidently considered the success of her assignment was etched on her face, and gloating triumph looked out of her eyes.

She let the door of her room close with a careless bang, while I, with sudden unreasoning panic, hurried into the nearest room, leaving the door ajar the merest crack. I did not see where I could have made an error in repacking her bag with the false bottom, but I knew that I should have no peace of mind until her departure from the hotel, with no apparent suspicion that anyone had been in her room.

Ruth Comes Out.

But I was not to get off so easily. In less than a minute, her door opened again and she stepped into hall. But, though I expected an angry call of "Maid!" she did not utter a sound. Instead, she stood motionless for several seconds, shooting keen glances around the hall. Then, suddenly—and noiselessly—she moved to a spot directly in front of Dicky's door, which was still ajar, and gave it a violent thrust.

I felt as if everything inside me had suddenly vanished, leaving only awful emptiness. I knew that if she should catch sight of Dicky, she would know at once that a trap had been laid for her, and in all probability would avoid the one which my father was planning to spring in Hal Meredith's office in the afternoon.

But Dicky evidently had been standing just behind the door, and had guessed her purpose just in time. At any rate, the door slammed in her face before she could enter the room, if that had been her intention, and at the sound, I popped out of the room in which I was hiding, as I naturally would have done at any unusual sound in the hall.

She did not see or hear me, until she took her hand from the doorknob, and turned around. Then I saw her eyes narrow, but I had my patter ready.

"Oh, Madam! That isn't permitted. I'm afraid I'll have to—"

She gave a scornful little laugh.

"You'll have to what—report me?" she said. "Can't I show a little sympathy for a poor sick man without your getting all steamed up about it?"

A Sudden Change.

Then her tone changed with terrifying suddenness.

"You're the one who's making the mistake," she snarled. "I'm going to report you — not you me! Come here!"

I did not obey her, but instead stepped backward.

"No, no, Madam," I babbled, and my simulated panic was more real than I would have admitted even to myself. "You look—so—so — funny. Madam! I'm — I'm afraid!"

"You'd better be afraid—not for your hide, but for your job!" she snapped. "There's something funny going on around here. What were you doing while I was gone, snooping around my bag? Trying to find something you could lift?"

FLYNN HAS NEW GIRL FRIEND, 19

Takes Her Yachting But Says They Won't Be Married.

This announcement, as made by an angry movie star who said it appeared as though a fellow couldn't even have a girl friend without getting into the headlines, embarrassed Flynn's friends, who said he'd already married Miss Eddington.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, August 15.

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of great activity, both public and private, with affairs of church and clergy prosperous. But there may be some sort of opposition or disagreement with superiors and as well a tendency to extravagance, waste and indulgence. All should endeavor to stabilize for endurance and permanency. Exercise good judgment and foresight, with prudence expenditures as well.

Those whose birthday it is may have the opportunity for putting their affairs on a firm and enduring basis, with future security and economic freedom the main objective. Diligence, concentrated effort, sound tactics and foresight should effect this end. However, there may be want of co-operation from superiors or employers, and an inclination for indulgence, extravagance and unwarranted outlay or expenditures may prove detrimental. Slow but sure is the slogan.

A child born on this day may have excellent qualities of character and sound abilities and aspirations although excessive generosity may lead it to extremes in indulgence and expenditure.

For Monday, August 16.

Monday's astrological forecast may not be interpreted as favorable. A definite danger from an uprooting and separative influence, precipitated by unfortunate quarrels, tempers, passions and emotional impulses or erratic moves, may prove devastating on circumstances, the fortunes, the health and peace of mind. All call for restraints, reason and moderation.

Those whose birthday it is may draw down upon themselves a sudden disruptive and injurious state of affairs, undermining their prospects for success, happiness and peace of mind. This by a tempestuous attitude, over-energetic use of the forces and faculties, as well as indulging in passionate and erratic impulses and emotions. It is an uprooting and separative force, precipitated by what might be turned into highly constructive channels, by restraint, self-control and calm decisions. Such devastation may have regrettable reactions on the physical and nervous well-being.

A child born on this day may be over zealous, impulsive, erratic, to its undoing. But with restraint it might accomplish much.

"The Authority on Authorities"

HEED HIS WARNINGS

WHEN YOUR partner bids a couple of suits and then, after you show that you like No Trumps, he rebids the lower to show he has suits of at least five cards in length, he is giving you a warning. Don't treat him as somebody who is trying to take the bid away from you. He is not your enemy, but you partner. And, if he is a sound bidder, he is merely trying to picture his holding to you, to let you decide the declaration. So, unless you are well fixed with honor strength, especially in the other two suits, you had better try one of his suits.

How risky that last bid was, especially with only a single stopper in clubs, and with the heart stoppers sitting under the opener's holding. East did some careful figuring, and then led his heart 5. Reckoning that he probably could get his partner into the lead once in some suit or another, he reckoned this would enable him eventually to take two tricks in hearts, plus his other two aces, plus the one his partner would get, beating the contract. He was right. North could not possibly set up nine tricks before west scored with the diamond K, whereupon a heart return made it work out as East expected.

If North had listened to his partner's bidding description of his hand, he would have realized that shortage in hearts and clubs would prevent many losers in those suits, and that a diamond contract should have been makable at the level of three. It would have been, with correct play, if the trump suit was guessed right. The defenders could have taken two tricks in trumps, one in hearts and one in spades, but no more, whereas the No Trump game contract never had a chance.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

I found the following little billet doux on my desk yesterday morning, Friday the 13th:

August 11, 1943

Dear Mr. Hess:

Congratulations on your magnificent editorial in last evening's paper concerning the tennis tournament, sponsored by your paper.

After such a hearty and sincere build-up in the first few paragraphs, I was very disappointed to find you, an impartial sports editor, call the finest of youngsters on any courts "chicken hearted" because they refused to enter a tournament in which the present champion, Meredith Fisher would participate. These youngsters are the very best losers you can find, but who wants to be a "good loser" every year? It was a great injustice to all of them, and speaking for them, hope you can rectify your statement shortly.

As for your idea as it was put in the column, suggesting Tennis Clubs, I am flattered to think you appreciated my views and future plans for the Maple Lake Racquet Club enough to publish them and straighten the idea out in the sportsmens minds. If the plan is carried through, I hope to share SOME of the laurels with you.

Very Sincerely,
Mary M. Fink.

The English language is a great thing. No matter how plainly it is written, it can be misinterpreted, especially when an attempt is made to read between the lines.

I didn't say, bluntly, that Mansfield's younger tennis players were chicken. I leave that up to them to say individually and for themselves. What I said, in actual quotes, was:

"I FEAR there's a LITTLE BIT of chicken in the hearts of the younger players. Certainly there are enough youngsters playing regularly to make up an interesting tournament."

And I can FEAR that Hitler and Mussolini will do a comeback, but it will take a lot more than my fear to make it true.

Furthermore, I pointed out, plainly, that the younger players, 15 and under, should have had their own tournament instead of having to play the 18-year-olds. I wouldn't call these kids chicken because they stayed out. Neither would I call the four challengers for Meredith Fisher's championship chicken.

I realize, Mary, that you were out of town at the time entries were taken, and there may have been others like you. There's no fear of chicken here. Also there are some whose work would not have permitted play. No chicken here either.

But there are still plenty who could have played and didn't. Their reasons are their own. They know whether it was chicken or not. And I can still fear that in many cases it was just plain chicken. Without doing anyone an injustice. Perhaps the kids are good losers. They can't prove it by staying out of competition.

I take no credit, Mary, for your idea of a Maple Lake club tournament. Let's inspect the actual quotes again:

"Some of the Maple Lake players have an idea to combat the anticlimax (after the city tournament). They're thinking of forming a Maple Lake tennis club and putting on their own tournament. It's a good idea."

I hope you put your tournament idea over, Mary, and that it's a big success. And you can have ALL the laurels. I also hope that you have so many young players in the tournament that the word chicken never again will be heard in the land.

And if there's anything I can do to help out, you can count on me. I mean that.

Appling Collects His 2,000th Bingle

CHICAGO —(AP)— Luke Appling, veteran White Sox shortstop hit his 2,000th major league hit on top of a six-day-old 1,000 run record.

* * *

A single in the first inning of yesterday's game with the Boston Red Sox placed the 34-year-old right hand hitter alongside 79 other big league players —eight of them contemporaries —who have reached the two grand mark.

The White Sox shortstop, who leads the American league hitting race at a .336 pace, stepped across the plate for the 1,000th time in the first game of a double header Sunday.

Rookie's Bat Wins For Braves

Nieman Clouts Fourth Homer, Beats Cubs.

By GLEN PERKINS

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Elmer (Butch) Nieman was making Manager Casey Stengel and fans of the Boston Braves very happy today with his application of the "story book" finish to baseball games.

Nieman hit his fourth home run yesterday — in the 10th inning with a mate on—to give Boston a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Thursday it was Nieman's 12th inning triple that provided the Braves with another victory over the Bruins, and last week, while the team was on the road, Butch won an extra inning game against the Brooklyn Dodgers. The next day his eighth inning circuit clout broke a tie and provided Boston with the necessary margin for victory.

Strangely enough, Nieman, a former all-Big Six halfback at Kansas State, appeared to have little, if any, big league possibilities last year when he played in the eastern league. In 10 games with Elmira and 107 with Scranton, the husky outfielder compiled a batting average of only .207, far below the mark necessary for a trial in the big time in ordinary years.

But under the tutelage of Stengel, Nieman is beginning to blossom and he celebrated his recent promotion to the cleanup position in the batting order by blasting out six blows in the last two days. The hits boosted his average to a respectable .274, an increase of 10 points in the last two days.

Claude Passeau was the victim of Nieman's bat as he went down to his eighth defeat. Danny McPayden reliever starter Nate Andrews in the seventh inning and was credited with the victory.

The Chicago-Boston tilt was the only game played in the National league as St. Louis at New York, Cincinnati at Brooklyn and Pittsburgh at Philadelphia were postponed.

In the American league, Luke Appling, veteran shortstop of the Chicago White Sox, joined the select circle of players who have banged out 2,000 hits during their careers by singling to drive in a run in the first inning and assist the Windy City boys to a 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The Cleveland Indians moved into the junior loop's fast changing second place today as they stretched their winning streak to six by dropping the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-4. Mel Harder, assisted through the last inning by Rookie Allie Reynolds, received credit for the victory when plunged the "A" deeper into the cellar.

Spud Chandler evened the New York Yankees' series with the St. Louis Browns by making his 15th victory a 4-0 shutout over the Missourians. The American league's leading hurler put six men down via the strikeout route and walked only one to hand Johnny Niggeling his sixth straight defeat. Rookie Catcher Ken Sears aided the league leaders with a homer in the fourth frame.

Smiling and barefooted, Marjorie Row, left above, of Detroit, and Catherine Fox of Glen Ridge, N. J., walk over the course at the Evanston, Ill., golf club before they met in the match play of the Women's Western Amateur golf tournament. Miss Fox eliminated her Detroit opponent, one up.

Cradle Kid Golfers Meet For Women's Western Title

By TOMMY DEVINE

EVANSTON, Ill. —(U.P.)— Two "cradle kid" golfers, Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., and Dorothy Germain of Philadelphia, meet today over the 36-hole route for the women's western amateur championship.

"Cradle kid" golfers is an apt description of the stars who battle for the crown left undefended by Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex. Both have been playing since early in their "pig tail curl" days. Miss Wall started playing when she was only eight years old and Miss Germain took up the pastime at 11.

Miss Wall advanced to the championship round yesterday by defeating Peggy Kirk of Findlay, O., 2 and 1, while Miss Germain had an easier time, eliminating Catherine Fox, 18-year-old Glen Ridge, N. J., school girl, 4 and 3.

The current western amateur is the seventh for Miss Wall. Twice she has been close to titles, but never could quite make the grade.

In 1941 she lost in the finals 4 and 3 to Mrs. Russell Mann of Omaha, Neb., and last year she was beaten in the semi-finals by Mrs. Mann, two-time western titlist. This is the first venture for Miss Germain in the amateur, but she was a semi-finalist in the recent western open championship.

Miss Germain rates as the slight favorite in today's match.

Miss Germain was in complete command of her match against Miss Fox from the second hole on. After the opening hole was halved, Miss Germain won five consecutive holes to build up an advantage that never was threatened seriously.

Miss Fox rallied briefly to win the seventh and ninth holes to cut the advantage to three up as the turn was made, but Miss Germain stretched the margin to four up again by winning the 12th hole and then coasted until time ran out on the pretty Jersey star.

Miss Wall started brilliantly. After the first hole was halved, Miss Wall won five consecutive holes. Then she cooled off and Miss Kirk hit a hot streak to win four straight holes and cut the margin to one up as they went to the 11th tee. The next two holes were halved.

The Menominee girl went two up again by winning the 13th when Miss Kirk found trouble with her tee shot. Miss Kirk kept the battle going by winning the 16th, but the match ended on the 17th green when she took a bogey four.

Brewers Boost League Lead

Take Double Header While Red Birds Lose

(By Associated Press)

The Milwaukee Brewers enjoyed a tighter hold today on first place in the American Association race after winning a doubleheader from Louisville while second place Columbus dropped a game to the Minneapolis Millers.

The Brewers cut loose with a five-run barrage in the eighth and final inning of last night's first contest after tieing the score, 3 to 3, in the last half of the sixth on Ted Norbert's home run.

The Colonels lost the nightcap, 5 to 4.

When the Columbus Red Birds lost last night's game—the first of a four game series — to the Millers, 8 to 3, they enabled the Minneapolis club to break a five-game losing streak. Emerging from their batting slump, the Millers pounded Ted Wilks, Ken Burkhart and Bill Beckman for 18 hits, Herman Clifton leading the assault with four singles.

St. Paul halted Toledo's five-game winning streak with a 5 to 2 triumph.

The Kansas City Blues took a 2 to 1 decision from Indianapolis after 11 innings.

Schoolboy Grid Sked Suffers

77 Schools Drop Game; Shortage In Coaches.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The rigors of war have extracted a heavy toll in playing talent, coaches and equipment from Ohio's high schools, Athletic Commissioner H. R. Townsend said today, but the Czar of Buckeye scholastic athletics predicted a "highly successful 1943 football campaign, despite the handicaps."

On the deficit side, Commissioner Townsend listed:

Last year 477 Ohio high schools played football, putting the Buckeye state second only to Texas in the number of competing squads. This year only 400 schools will be in the Ohio scrap.

Between Sept. 1, 1942, and May 1, 1943, the Ohio schools lost 354 coaches. Prior to Sept. 1, more than 80 coaches departed. Of that total, 347 are definitely known to be in the service, along with many others who have left coaching jobs since May 1. There is a definite shortage of trained coaches.

The armed services have called a host of high school athletes, cutting deeply into the playing personnel. Others, still eligible for play, have given up athletics to get into essential industry, while boys living on farms probably will forgo sports to help feed the nation.

Gasoline and travel restrictions, especially if the value of gasoline coupons is cut from four to three gallons, may upset schedules and attendance to some extent.

Shifting to the brighter side, Townsend declared:

"The various restrictions did not slash attendance last year. And I don't expect a drop this season. There is plenty of money available to buy tickets, and the fans want to see sports of all kinds. The gasoline problem may cut the attendance some, but the additional money angle will more than make up the difference.

"There is plenty of equipment on hand for the teams, and football shoes have been taken off the ration list. We have been shunted back to the old type footballs and basketballs, the newer molded balls being out for the duration. The change was made to allow use of reclaimed rubber, the bolded balls demanding all new rubber.

"I'm in favor of carrying on to the limit, not only because of the recreation football gives the fans, but for the training it provides for boys about to enter the service. Football, of course, is the hardest hit of the scholastic sports. Basketball and all the others, I believe, will go on without a hitch, and plenty of spectators are assured."

For teams that did not hold spring football practice, the fall training session starts Aug. 20. For those which held spring workouts, the fall practice starts Sept. 1. The playing season extends from Sept. 17 to Nov. 27, both inclusive.

Townsend said he did not expect teams losing playing personnel to turn from 11-man to six-man football this year, since there was a heavy drop in the abbreviated sport a year ago.

"This season, and all the rest of the war seasons, if any," the commissioner said, "will provide varsity careers for a lot of boys who otherwise would not have been able to play. With the outstanding athletes in the service, the schools must call on secondary talent to fill their squads. It's a great thing for the boys, and it looks like a great season for the fans.

"Football is a great training medium for boys going into the armed services, and football is one thing Ohio has plenty of. And we'll continue to have it."

SEVEN ENTRIES START IN SHERIDAN HANDICAP

CHICAGO —(INS)— Seven entries, headed by Hal Price Headley's Anticlimax, will start in the $10,000 added Sheridan handicap at Washington Park race track today.

Anticlimax will go to the post with top weight of 120 pounds for the mile and furlong feature, or seven more than he carried when he finished third to Marriage and Thumbs Up in the recent $50,000 Arlington handicap.

Indians Move Into Second In Standings

Fourth Straight Victory Over Athletics Helps Tribe Status.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The second place Cleveland Indians bid a farewell to the Philadelphia Athletics—victims of four straight beatings—after today's windup of the current series.

The Redskins moved into their present league standing by capturing yesterday's contest 6 to 4 for their eighth victory in nine starts and their sixth in a row.

Mel Harder kept the Mackmen in hand with eight hits to chalk up his fifth win of the season against three losses, but needed help in the ninth after two were out. Allie Reynolds relieved the veteran right-hander and retired the final batter.

The Indians scored three times in the fourth inning and added another trio of runs in the seventh against Don Black, who allowed 10 blows.

Roy Cullenbine walked to open the fourth. Mickey Rocco's single and a pass to Manager Lou Boudreau loaded the bases. Black's wild pitch scored Cullenbine and Ray Mack's one bagger tallied Rocco and Boudreau.

Mack singled again in the seventh and moved to second on Harder's sacrifice. Jimmy Grant batted for Third Baseman Russ Peters and walked. Oris Hockett's one-baser brought in Mack and Grant came home when the ball got away from Johnny Welaj. Cullenbine then singled to score Hockett.

In today's finale, Jack Salveson goes to the mound for the Indians against Luman Harris for the A's.

BROOKLYN—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds have the opportunity today to square the series with the Brooklyn Dodgers in a doubleheader.

So far, the Bums have won two, and yesterday's contest was called "no go" by the weatherman.

Bucky Walters and Elmer Riddle will handle the pitching duties today opposed by Bill Lohrman and Curt Davis or Ed Head.

Possibility the Cincinnati lineup will be altered somewhat was seen last night when Manager Bill McKechnie said he was considering Max Marshall, left-fielder, for a spot on the bench.

Marshall's hitting has not been up to expectations and McKechnie says he may put Bert Haas, the team's handy guy, in his place. Haas has been filling in at first for big Frank McCormick who has just recovered from an ailing back.

In center, McKechnie plans to alternate with Estel Crabtree and rookie Dain Clay. Gee Walker, the regular center gardener, is in Cincinnati taking treatment for a torn back muscle.

Draft board officials announced yesterday that Pitcher Johnny Vander Meer and Haas have been ordered to report for induction near the end of August.

Deer Season Set for Ohio

Tentatively Booked Dec. 6 Through 18.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— An open season on deer in several sections of Ohio has been approved tentatively by the state conservation and natural resources commission because of the deer damage to food and fruit crops, it was announced today.

The commission approved tentatively a season beginning Dec. 6 and continuing through Dec. 18. The suggestions were made to Commissioner Don Waters and await official approval—believed just a formality.

Deer may be shot in Scioto, Adams and Pike counties in conservation District No. 7 and in all the counties in District No. 3 which includes Ashtabula, Columbiana, Cuyahoga, Geauga, Lake, Mahoning, Portage, Stark, Summit and Trumbull, according to the tentative rules adopted by the commission.

No hunter will be permitted more than one permit and shooting was expected to be restricted to the hours between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. only one deer may be taken by any hunter during the open season.

Taking of deer may be done only with shotguns or bow and arrows. Revolvers, pistols and rifles will be prohibited under the tentative regulations.

The commission indicated it was opening the season because of reports of extensive crop damage in District 3 and because a surplus of deer has arisen.

The commission said that a maximum of 625 permits per day will be issued for shooting in the areas in the three southern counties on a "first come, first served" basis.

JUDGE FREES 21, PASSES CIGARS

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Twenty-one men were standing penitently before Magistrate Robert H Mahoney in night court. They were charged with dice shooting. As the judge grimly prepared to pronounce sentence, Patrolman Vincent Hagan whispered in his ear.

The magistrate jumped from his chair, tapped his gavel hurriedly on his desk, exclaimed, "Case dismissed," and hurried out of the courtroom He offered no explanations, but later a box of cigars arrived.

His wife had given birth to a baby girl at St. Vincent's hospital.

MARKET TILTS DOWNWARD IN EARLY TRADING

Fractional Minus Signs For Select Issues Posted; Business Increases.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks generally tilted to the losing side in today's early market proceedings.

Fractional minus signs were recorded for U. S. Steel, General Motors, and Kennecott. Chrysler managed to advance moderately along with Bethlehem.

Trend students scanned the commerce department's summary disclosing that, while manufacturers' daily average sales during June increased 3½ per cent over May to equal the February peak, inventories took their sharpest drop for any month since 1939.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Grains opened steady today with prices little changed. Rye gave the best account of itself in early trading as previous short sellers continued to buy back into the market.

Wheat started ¼ lower to ⅝ higher, September $1.43⅛-¼, December $1.45¼-½, and Rye was unchanged to ⅞ higher, September 97¾.

Offers Governor Proof Highway Payroll's Padded

the men were being paid for work every day as common laborers, O'Donnell continuing to serve on the school board attending daytime sessions, and Rose and LoPresti carrying on their law practices.

Rose and LoPresti, the newspaper said, do not work as laborers and have not given up their law practices, despite an assertion by Bricker that some highway workers have outside employment was "untrue."

Meanwhile Judge Thomas Powers of Akron, president of the Ohio Civil Service commission council, promised to investigate reports of civil service law violations by the highway department in the Cleveland area.

He said he would investigate reports that highway department employes worked for Congressman George H. Bender, Cuyahoga county Republican central committeeman, while on the state payroll, in violation of restrictions against political activity by civil servce employes.

THEATERS

Ginny Simms Seen.

Radio's singing star, Ginny Simms, has been chosen to play the leading feminine role in Bud Abbott and Lou Costello's latest picture, "Hit the Ice." Miss Simms, a San Francisco girl, gained renown as the featured vocalist with Kay Kyser's orchestra, and when the bandleader and his aggregation made a picture a few seasons back, she made an instantaneous hit. Ginny sings four musical numbers. Johnny Long and his band furnish the music.

Guard Secrets.

Secrecy is the secret of military success. Stonewall Jackson, Confederate general in the Civil war, never would reveal his battle plans, to his second in command. The dreadful consequences of letting slip military secrets in our present war time is revealed in "Next of Kin," the English released film now at the Madison. Madison co-attraction stars the fast-rising Donald O'Connor in "Mr. Big."

Rochester Two-Timer.

Eddie (Rochester) Anderson foreswears adventures with the polar bear Carmichael and other antics to become a thoroughly terrified, but none the less comical character as Little Joe, sinner, in M. G. M.'s "Cabin in the Sky." The forces of good and evil are after Rochester's soul. He is a gambling man, he steps out with other women and in general is a bad actor. But the forces of good win out and Rochester enters the pearly gates. Co-attraction is "Silver Spurs," starring Roy Rogers.

MASCOT RESCUES 2 TRAPPED MEN

Brings Aid to Men Caught In Refrigerator.

SAN DIEGO Cal. — (UP) — A mongrel mascot named General MacArthur was credited today with saving the lives of two men trapped in a refrigerator.

The dog is attached to a medical group. Pfc. Lucas Armbruster of Festus, Mo. and civilian engineer Jack Gates became trapped in the icebox while inspecting serum.

"General MacArthur" heard them pounding on the heavy door. He ran through several buildings until he found night clerk Jimmy Garcia. Barking and leaping, he led Garcia back to the refrigerator and scratched at the door. Garcia opened the door and the two men stumbled out.

rope to blast the Ploesti oilfields in Rumania last month. The Vienna flight was 150 miles longer than that to Ploesti.

Crossing the Mediterranean and the heart of the Balkans, the American pilots were believed to have dealt a shattering blow to Germany's already faltering aircraft industry.

The Wiener Neustadt works, situated about 30 miles south of Vienna, employs several thousand workers in four or five big assembly plants which, when a member of the former United Press staff in Berlin visited them about two years ago were turning out about 30 planes a week.

Wiener Neustadt also has one of the largest advanced air training schools in Germany. Both plant and schools are situated on flat, open country easily identifiable from the air. The Germans always had considered the area "safe" because it was beyond the range of British-based aircraft.

Italians Renew Cries For Peace

LONDON —(U.P.)— New cries for peace echoed through the streets of bomb-ravaged Rome, Milan and Turin following the latest series of Anglo-American raids, European advices said today, and the London Daily Mail predicted that the intensified aerial offensive may drive the Badoglio government out of office.

Reinforcements of military police and troops were called out to put down peace demonstrations in Milan, hardest hit of the three cities, and are maintaining constant patrols to prevent further outbreaks, Swiss dispatches reported.

(A broadcast of the Swiss Schwarzenburg radio heard by U. S. monitors said Dino Alfieri, Italian ambassador to Germany and a prominent Fascist, had been arrested according to reliable sources. No details were given.)

SENT TO PRISON

Mansfielder Accused of Parole Violation; Gets 2 Years.

Cited into common pleas court by Probation Officer Ralph A. Hughes for violation of his probation, John D. Ritchie was sentenced by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch to the state penitentiary for one to two years.

Hughes reported that Ritchie had not once reported though he had been on probation since 1941 and that he had left the state without notifying probation officials.

The original charge against Ritchie was arson for the burning of the Trailer City grocery.

SOVIET TROOPS ENTER KHARKOV, HIT REAR GUARD

Germans Jam Escape Corridor In Attempt to Get Out Of Tottering City.

new offensive, the Soviet high command said.

The assault to break final resistance in Kharkov, Russia's fourth largest city, was pressed from the north, northeast and southeast with victory-flushed Soviet troops battering down rear guard resistance.

Front dispatches quoted workers who escaped from Kharkov that the Germans have been pulling out from Kharkov in steady streams through a narrowing corridor to the southwest since Aug. 6.

The military traffic through the streets of Kharkov was so heavy, the workers said, that it was impossible to cross them. The Axis troops were accused of carrying away every movable thing in private houses as they left.

Russian columns yesterday overran more than 30 towns and villages in advances of up to eight miles, including Bolshaya Danilovka, only one mile northeast of Kharkov, and Losevo, eight miles to the southeast and the last railroad station on the line running northwestward from Chuguev.

A third Soviet force was smashing into the city's outskirts along the railroad from Belgorod, to the north.

Heavy tanks self-propelled guns spearheaded the Russian advances, breaking up every enemy counter-attack and inflicting fearful losses on the retreating defenders. Some 4,000 Germans were killed in one sector alone.

Enormous booty was seized as the Russians turned the enemy's retreat to a rout in some areas.

Front reports said the new offensive on the Spas Demensk front, 80 miles north of Bryansk and an equal distance southeast of Smolensk, the two strongest enemy bases on the central front, touched off fighting of unparalleled ferocity.

Soviety artillery, tanks and planes smashed one of the strongest natural and artificial defense areas three hours after the start of the attack Wednesday dawn.

Executing the classical pincers movement, the Russians attacked simultaneously from points north and south of Spas Demensk along a 30-mile front and effected a junction behind the city, then captured it in a series of street battles in which 2,000 Germans were killed.

The Russians were in a position to swing southwest behind Bryansk or northeast toward Smolensk.

The Russian offensive against Bryansk also made steady progress with more than 20 towns and villages being captured yesterday and the threat to Karachev, key defense point only 25 miles to the east, mounting with the fall of Osinaya, 3½ miles to the east.

Some 2,000 Germans were killed and 35 tanks captured or destroyed. Prisoners reported that the savage Russian attacks had reduced one division of 15,000 men to 300 and a regiment of 3,000 men to 120.

Chiang Invited To Quebec, Report

LONDON—(INS)—Certain circles in the capital of China report that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek has been invited to attend the discussions of Allied leaders in Quebec, an Exchange Telegraph company dispatch from Chungking said today.

Hint Allies At Policy-Plan Stage

LONDON —(AP)— Speculation in Quebec that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden might go to Canada to participate in the Allied strategy conferences was interpreted in London today as an indication that the Allies had reached a policy-forming stage in regard to handling the Axis, its satellites and occupied countries.

The foreign office said it could not comment on reports of Eden's prospective trip, but it did not deny such a move, and English newspapers were permitted to write interpretatively about it.

The foreign office also refused comment on speculation that Eden might go from Canada to Moscow.

FDR Renews Demand For Full Surrender

WASHINGTON —(INS)— President Roosevelt, on the eve of his "Victory in Europe" war strategy conference with Prime Minister Churchill, today declared that the United Nations "stand upon the threshold of major developments in this war."

The chief executive renewed his Casablanca declaration, made jointly with the British premier, that the war against the Axis powers will be prosecuted until they cry for "unconditional surrender."

"We are determined that we shall gain total victory over our enemies," the president declared.

His declaration was made in a statement on the occasion of the second anniversary of the signing of the Atlantic charter and the eighth anniversary of the Social Security act.

Mr. Roosevelt re-emphasized two primary war aims—the right of self-determination for the peoples of the world and world-wide collaboration in the postwar world for "security for all."

had not been invited to the conference still remained uppermost in the minds of diplomatic observers.

Apparently to officials gathering in Quebec, Stalin's statement, issued through the official Russian news agency, served to remind them that the United Nations still had international political problems — and those problems still faced solution.

Virtually an entire day's efforts by correspondents failed to elicit an official response to Russia's assertion that Stalin had not been invited to attend the Quebec parleys.

Lacking official clarification, two interpretations were placed upon the Russian announcement:

1. That Russia was further indicating her desire to carry on the war and the peace under her own dictates, and,

2. That the Quebec talks were concerned only with the Pacific theater of war—where the USSR is not involved.

Gives Himself Up — William Richey, Hayesville, a sailor on leave from Seattle, Wash., came to Mansfield police headquarters at midnight Friday to report he had been absent over leave since July 7. He is being held at the city jail until police receive a report from naval authorities on what to do with him.

Attends C. of C. School—John Routzon, secretary-manager of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, left today for Evanston, Ill., where he will attend a special school at Northwestern university for Chamber of Commerce men all next week. The classes are sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Commercial secretaries.

Held to Grand Jury — Harold Dockery, 22, colored, of Ashland, was bound over to the Richland county grand jury today under $1,500 bond after he pleaded guilty in municipal court to a charge of driving a car without the owner's consent. He confessed the theft of a car owned by William Fendrick, 419 West Fourth street, Wednesday night from a Mansfield street. The car was recovered later in Ashland.

and two and one-half gallons for their B and C coupons.

There was no explanation today of the ration slash in the middle west, but Harold Ickes, federal petroleum administrator, said reduced civilian consumption "is necessary in the middle west and southwest because of an already existing shortage of crude oil in that area" and an impending shortage in the nation brought to a head by huge military requirements.

OPA officials said they hoped the reduction in the middle west and southwest would build up sufficient supplies to make it possible to ease rationing restriction in the east a little later. Eastern motorists have been complaining of the "inequality" between the amount of gas they receive and the rations in the middle west.

about the youth center which was proposed several weeks ago by the Junior Association of Commerce. He told them that the J. A. C. had been unable to find suitable quarters at a price that the organization could afford to pay.

The girls' plan calls for a 25-cent charge on Saturday nights and 10 or 15 cents during the week. The charge would include a dance orchestra on Saturdays and free use of the phonograph on other nights.

Asserting that they want a recreation center that "will be open to boys and girls on both sides of Main street," the girls said the "dry night club" should be open to all youths who are within the age limit.

Confesses Murder of Twins

Confession to the kidnap-slaying of Charles and James Collins, 13-year-old twin brothers, and the kidnap-attack of a nine-year-old boy has been given to Cleveland police by Henry William Hagert, 17, who was released only a few days ago from the psychopathic ward of City hospital. The youth is pictured right above handcuffed to a detective as he led police to the lonely, wooded suburban spot where he had left the twins' bodies after shooting them.

Quiz Slayer of Twins On Other Sex Crimes

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND—Henry W. Hagert, 17-year-old psychopath who confessed abducting the small son of a city official and slaying 12-year-old twin brothers, today was being questioned relentlessly by police about other sex crimes against children during the past year.

Apparently unconcerned over his crimes, police reported the youth already had confessed to a criminal attack upon another 13-year-old boy in addition to the slayings and the abduction.

Hagert was expected to be charged with first degree murder in the slayings of the twins either today or Monday, it was learned.

The youth, released Monday from the psychopathic ward at City hospital, unexpectedly confessed to shooting and slaying James and Charles Collins yesterday and then led police officers to a spot in Bay Village where the bodies of the boys lay.

A parolee from Lancaster reformatory, the youth was tight-lipped and apparently unemotional as he told officers he killed the boys just "for the heck of it."

"I didn't like those boys," he confessed. "I shot Jimmy first and then made the other one go with me. Then I shot him later."

Hagert was picked up for questioning in the kidnaping-attack of John Buchanan, young son of E. B. Buchanan, city food inspector, when he suddenly blurted his confession to police officers. Then he admitted to kidnaping young Buchanan, but denied criminally attacking the boy.

The crimes brought assurances from Governor Bricker and State Welfare Director Herbert Mooney

Mother Asks Police to Search For Boy, Last Seen Friday.

Ruhl Marks, 13-year-old Mansfield boy, has been missing from his home at 279 Wood street, since 10 a. m. Friday, his mother, Mrs. Paul Mauritz, reported to police today.

Mrs. Mauritz said the boy often talked of going swimming and she feared something had happened to him while on a swimming trip. She said he had been mowing lawns for neighbors shortly before he disappeared yesterday.

He was described to police as being blond and wearing a brown or black shirt.

REPORTS BATTLE

Spanish News Agency Says 70 Allied Ships Attacked.

(Editors Note: The announcement lacked confirmation from any official Allied source.)

DRIVERS 'FILL UP' TO BEAT COUPON SLASH

Mansfield Gas Stations Report Rush of Business as OPA Makes Announcement.

3 GALLONS PER TICKET

Change Takes Effect Sunday Midnight, Affects South And Midwest.

Learning that their gas ration coupons will be worth only three gallons each after midnight Sunday, Mansfield motorists last night and today staged a rush on filling stations to fill their automobile tanks before the coupon value drops.

The OPA announced officially last night that gas rations in Ohio and the middle west will be slashed 25 per cent Sunday midnight, reducing the value of A, B, and C coupons from four gallons to three gallons.

Mansfield filling station operators, who reported the biggest business since the days just preceding gas rationing last year, had no trouble understanding the rush. Three coupons today will buy as much gas as four next Monday.

A Park avenue west station reported yesterday's business tripled the usual Friday sales, and the predictions were that today's business would top the Friday figures.

The proprietor of a station on South Main street said his sales were far ahead of normal, and several times last night six or seven cars were lined up waiting for service.

It was the same story all over the city area. While stations still had gas today, proprietors feared that if the rush continues, their supply won't last until the ration cut goes into effect at 12:01 a. m. Monday.

Although the mid-west gas ration slash forecast easing of pleasure driving restrictions in the east, it appeared today that eastern motorists won't get any more fuel until late in September. Along the Atlantic coast drivers have been getting along on one and one-half gallons for their A coupons.

RECORD BILL

5,800 to Get Statements For City Garbage Collection.

Mansfield will owe a record garbage bill for the three months, starting September 1, Fred A. Lingafelter, secretary of the city water and garbage departments, said today.

Increased use of city garbage collection service boosted the quarterly figure to an all-time high of $11,000 which is due and payable from Aug. 15 through Aug. 25, Lingafelter said.

Bills were mailed today to 5,800 garbage service subscribers. This situation pleases city and county authorities who have waged a campaign against the dumping of garbage along county roads or in places where it becomes a health threat.

Offers Governor Proof Highway Payroll's Padded

In the third of a series of articles charging pay roll padding in the state highway department in Cuyahoga county, the Cleveland Press, in the face of the assertion by Gov. John W. Bricker that he could "find no evidence to support the charges" today had named several prominent Cleveland business and professional men as listed on highway department pay rolls as laborers.

Among the group, the Press said, was John E. O'Donnell, former Republican candidate for mayor and veteran member of the Cleveland school board; Emanuel Rose, a Republican politician who has served twice as a short term judge in municipal and common pleas court, and Joseph LoPresti, an attorney, a precinct committeeman, and brother of Republican leader S. M. LoPresti.

The Press article said that

Jury Awards Weekley $500 Damage Verdict

Reaches Agreement In $10,000 Slander Action After Debating Evidence In Case For Eight Hours.

After eight and a half hours of deliberation, a jury of five men and seven women returned a verdict for Willard S. Weekley in his $10,000 slander suit against Dr. John A. Reed and awarded him $500 damages.

The jury reached its decision at 8:30 p. m. yesterday, an hour and a half after recess for dinner. The case went to the jury at 10 a. m. Friday.

Immediately after the verdict was announced defense attorneys gave notice that they would ask for a new trial.

A. S. Beach of the defense counsel said today that the motion would be submitted Monday. He said that the grounds would probably be the usual ones of error in the admission and rejection of evidence by the court and error in the court's charge to the jury. He said that defense attorneys had not conferred as yet and could not say whether the verdict would be appealed in the event that a new trial was denied.

It was reliably learned that 14 ballots were taken with the jury divided all the way through eight for the plaintiff and four for the defendant. Late yesterday afternoon the jury sent a note to Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, presiding judge, saying, "we have taken 10 ballots and are still divided. What shall we do now?" The judge told them to keep on trying to reach an agreement.

Shortly before 8:30 the jury knocked on the door to inform the bailiff that nine of the 12 had concurred on a verdict.

When the defendant and the plaintiff and their attorneys had been located, court reconvened. Nearly 30 persons, a mixture of

GETS ORDERS

Laval Told to Put Fascists In Cabinet, Says Algiers.

LONDON — (INS) — Nazi Germany has served an ultimatum upon Premier Pierre Laval of France demanding cabinet posts for Marcel Deat and Jacques Doriot, France's leading fascists, the Algiers radio reported today.

The ultimatum was said to contain the following demands: 1—Deat to be named minister of war and the interior. 2—Doriot to receive the portfolios of propaganda and labor. 3—The French government to return to Paris from Vichy.

"If Laval refuses to admit these two men into the French government," the Algiers announcer said, "the Germans will set up a government in Paris which will not include Laval."

TANGLE FATAL

Man Stabbed, Fiancee Wounded In Triangle Dispute.

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — A tangle of affections in a rooming house last night led to the fatal stabbing of David Ritchey, 24, and serious injury of Pauline Caudill, his 20-year-old fiancee, as they announced their intention to marry, police reported today.

Their assailant, James W. Urick, 51, formerly lived in the same house and attacked them as they announced their wedding plans at a gathering, police said.

The body—found buried in a mass of debris—was identified as that of Mrs. C. B. Simon, 75, of Copen, the last of the missing victims.

Salamaua Left In Smoking Ruins by 45-Minute Bombing

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—Much of Salamaua, Japan's vital air base on northeastern New Guinea, lay in smoking ruins today, devastated in 45 minutes by 177 tons of bombs.

Debris littered the waterfront of the one-mile long isthmus; the big airdrome, two miles inland, was the scene of widespread damage; Chinatown and the village of Kela, which faces Salamaura across a bay, were covered with dust and smoke.

Whether this raid presages capture of Salamaua remains to be seen. But, it was just such a concentrated aerial blasting which preceded the last decisive ground triumph scored by the Allies in the New Guinea sector. That was the capture in mid-July of Mubo.

Today's communique gave this picture of the devastation wrought by Friday's raiders, attacking in five waves:

"The whole area was covered with dust, smoke and debris. Fires rose to a height of 6,000 feet after the explosions of munition dumps. The portion of the town on the isthmus has virtually ceased to exist, and whole area is in ruins."

More than 1,000 tons of bombs, dropped in 30-odd days of raiding, have burst upon Salamaua since the two-pronged Pacific offensive got under way June 30 with Salamaua the immediate objective on the left and the Munda airfield, New Georgia island, on the right.

Above Munda, captured Aug. 5, today's comunique reported concerning the Solomons drive that Japanese resistance was crushed Friday at Zieta village by United States jungle troops who now are within three and a half miles of Bairoko harbor on the Kula gulf. Other forces already have the Japanese garrison at Bairoko encircled.

ASKS PARLEY ON PARK PROBLEM

Mayor Proposes Establishment Of Recreation Facilities For Colored Persons.

Mayor W. J. Locke today asked city council and the parks board to name representatives or committees to meet with him and a delegation of Mansfield colored residents to decide on a plan for providing more recreation facilities for the colored people.

"Putting this thing off any longer won't solve the problem," said the mayor, who suggested that the solution may be in establishing a new park in the north end of the city when colored residents could elect a board and name the custodian.

It may be possible after the park is established to provide a swimming pool for colored people, he added.

The mayor and council recently received a petition signed by more than 100 Mansfield colored residents who asked that they be permitted use of the city's public parks and swimming pools on an equal basis with white people.

Mayor Locke said he asked in letters to council and the parks board only that they choose representatives to attend the meeting which he will arrange later.

High School Girls Set Pace, Obtain Recreational Site

Four girl pupils at St. Peter's high school had started the ball rolling today for a youth recreation center in the city to help solve the juvenile delinquency problem.

Conferring with Mayor W. J. Locke and Edwin L. Balyeat president of the Junior Association of Commerce, the quartet of girls were granted a meeting Monday night with the mayor and J. A. C. members at which their proposal for a "dry night club" will be discussed.

The girls, Mary and Catherine Letizia Rose Romano, and Sally Vasilovic told the mayor and Balyeat that they have arranged for a room on Park avenue east and have enough young people interested in the project to clean and redecorate the quarters for a recreation center for boys and girls from 14 to 18 years old.

Balyeat said the girls wanted to know why nothing had been done

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Office of Price administration today issued formal orders permitting a $4 a ton increase in the manufacturers' price of newsprint Sept. 1.

Allies Batter Strait, Soviets Enter Kharkov

Reds Smash Nazi Rear Guards as Fall of Key City Nears.

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—Russian troops were reported storming through the streets of Kharkov today, battering down rear guard resistance of Germans trying to cover the headlong flight of the garrison.

Soviet front dispatches reported an enormous traffic jam in the narrowing escape corridor southwest of Kharkov as hundreds of trucks and car evacuating German troops tried to get through, causing a state of confusion bordering on panic.

Red army assault forces were storming into the city through the northern, northeastern and eastern fringes, while on their wings other units were slashing into the flanks of the menaced German communications to the southwest in attempts to complete the encirclement of Kharkov and trap the enemy rear guard.

With the fall of Kharkov at hand, the Germans were devoting their main strength to an effort to halt the Red army onrush midway along the railroad to Poltava and northwest of the fallen Akhtyrka bases.

Several fresh German armored and infantry divisions, heavily supported by planes, began strong counter-thrusts northwest of Kharkov. The Soviet drive toward the Dnieper on a broad front appeared to have been impeded somewhat by the Nazi action, but the Red air force still held overwhelming mastery of the skies and there was no sign of a halt on the offensive.

Some 350 miles to the north, Red army columns drove through crumbling Axis defenses half way between Smolensk and Bryansk on the central front in the third Soviet offensive in less than a month.

More than 10 towns and villages have been liberated in advances of up to 13 miles along a 30-mile front in the Spas Demensk area in the initial thrust of the Messina Bridgehead Crumbles as Foe Loses Hold on Mt. Etna.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa — Axis evacuation of Sicily is in full swing across the Straits of Messina, it was announced today, as the beaten German army raced to the coast in an effort to escape a death trap closed tighter by capture of five more towns in Allied advances of from two to seven miles.

German troops pulling out of the crumbling Messina bridgehead fled across the narrow three to 10-mile wide straits to the Italian mainland under battering attack by Allied planes despite heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Headquarters reports said the trickle of escaping enemy forces had grown to a tide. Every type of boat was pressed into service.

Allied planes sank six small enemy craft off the coast while British motor torpedo boats, slipping into Messina harbor Wednesday night, torpedoed three merchantmen.

The Allied armies squeezing relentlessly on the faltering Axis lines now dominate all the Mt. Etna area, it was announced, and may have cut off many enemy troops in the mountains holding rear guard positions.

Heavy attacks by the American Seventh and British Eighth armies were driving desperately-resisting Axis rearguards back along both the northern and eastern coasts within 35 miles of Messina and threatening to trap thousands in the mountainous interior.

One American column, after consolidating positions in newly-captured Randazzo on the northwestern slopes of Mt. Etna, thrust seven miles up the road to Cape D'Orlando and seized Floresta.

The American north coast column advanced two miles from Brolo and captured Piraino, six miles east of Cape D'Orlando, while British forces pounding along the east coast advanced their line three miles along a five-

CAIRO—(U.P.)—American pilots dropped more than 350,000 pounds of explosives on the German aircraft plant at Wiener Neustadt and on their return said they left it "a shambles."

(By United Press)

LONDON—A large force of American Liberator bombers from the middle-eastern command smashed at one of Germany's biggest aircraft plants south of Vienna in a record 2,600-mile daylight raid yesterday, a communique revealed today.

Demonstrating to a bomb-jittery Germany that virtually no corner of its domain is now beyond the range of Allied aircraft, the giant four-engined planes loosed tons of explosive and fire bombs on the Wiener Neustadt Messerschmitt works. The raid was within hours of bombing attacks in the Axis capitals—Rome and Berlin.

"Preliminary reports show that many bombs fell in the target area among hangars and factory buildings, but full details are not available," a communique issued in Cairo said.

A communique broadcast by the Berlin radio acknowledged that the attack caused damage to buildings in "southeastern Germany" and casualties in "one place."

The raid, the first by planes of the western Allies on Austria, coincided with the daylight attack by northwest African-based American Flying Fortresses and medium bombers on Rome.

The Liberators were drawn from the Ninth U. S. Air Force with headquarters in Cairo, the same force which sent a formation sweeping across southern Eu-

STRATEGY: High Commands Plan 'Knockouts' at Quebec

(By International News Service)

QUEBEC—The attack strategy of the United Nations today came under the personal supervision of the United States military and naval high commands, whose arrival here was made public by officials charged with making announcements on the forthcoming meetings between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Traveling in advance of the president, the military and naval leaders of the United States arrived in Quebec and immediately plunged into the herculean tasks of designing the blows that observers here feel may well spell the end of the European conflict before January 1944.

On the scene here were Army Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall, Navy Chief of Operations, Admiral Ernest J. King, Army Air Forces Chief H. H. Arnold; Army Services of Supply Chief Gen. Brehon Somervell; and the President's Personal Chief of Staff, Adm. William D. Leahy.

The leaders of the two english speaking allies, meanwhile, were expected to convene for final discussions within the next several days.

The presence of the United States high command plunged this Canadian city into a new welter of speculation on what is in store for Germany, Japan, and Italy. But the sobering announcement from Moscow that Stalin

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—In my discussion of insubordination, shirking, ship-jumping and other serious misconduct of civilian sailors on the merchant ships of the United States, I may have given an impression that this sort of doing is the rule on vessels manned by the communist party-line organization known as the national maritime union. If so, I should like to say that it is not the rule. On the other hand, however, it is not exceptional but commonplace.

Pegler

A good ship with a good captain who knows his authority and maintains it and treats his crew fairly but firmly may have no trouble at all. Many ships return from their voyages with only a few petty entries in their logs, some of them due to honest misunderstandings. But even a good master of a good ship may have trouble with one or several sailors who have carried over into the war the attitude of insolence and even of defiance which was cultivated in time of peace with the encouragement of the New Deal's labor and maritime agencies in Washington. This was a reaction to the historic ill-treatment of sailors, but instead of stopping at the point where ancient wrongs were corrected and the men were guaranteed redress under the law, the revolutionaries went much further.

They discovered that they could get away with conduct which not only broke discipline but actually jeopardized the lives of all on board, and that by the time a complaint went through the works in Washington their penalties were either wiped out or reduced to negligible size. And the master, realizing that they were only wasting some of their own precious time ashore between voyages in attending hearings and giving testimony, got discouraged and overlooked offenses which, for the sake of discipline, should have been logged and honestly rebuked with the backing of the government.

Some ships are just bad ships, old, uncomfortable, dirty and inefficient and the quality of the crews often is consistent with that of the vessels. Some grievances can be ironed out and many are adjusted in port by a few words between an understanding executive of the management and the union delegate who makes the complaint. On the other hand, however, a careless or inefficient ship's officer may neglect or refuse to correct conditions which should not exist and which increase the normal discomforts of a hard calling, and trouble follows over causes which the owners may know nothing about.

Drunkenness on board is not a rare offense but it is obvious that the ships could not have made the record that they made if it were the custom of a majority or even a large minority of the sailors to be roaring drunk together. No man begrudges the sailor's right, so stoutly defended by some of the communists, to get plastered in port after a dangerous crossing but it is no compliment to the whole personnel to over-emphasize this right in argument, for that would suggest that they are all rum-pots. The sailors, themselves, might resent that.

Much of the trouble arises from a course of conduct which might be called mere heckling. The communists adopted a policy of nagging the skippers and other officers with constant, petty demands and complaints just to show the other sailors that they could violate the traditional discipline of the sea and count on the backing of their union and of the United States government. This was a lure to attract new members and there is no doubt that the communists have greatly impaired discipline and put some captains in doubt of their authority.

Some of the new young naval officers commanding the blueprints of the armed guard crews also have put up with affronts to themselves and their men and their tolerance of this mischief may be attributed to their inexperience in command. These ensigns and lieutenants are responsible for the safety of the ships on which they serve and, notwithstanding the strong political connections which the communists enjoy in Washington, most of their superiors would take pleasure in upholding them.

As new ships by the hundreds come off the ways, the seagoing talent will be spread very thin. New masters and other officers will be needed in tremendous numbers, and new unlicensed personnel as well, and the communists are making frantic grabs for these sailors, realizing that if they don't get them the communist element will be outnumbered and the union either discredited or taken over by decent, patriotic Americans. The odds seem to favor the communists. However, the government has consistently driven civilian war workers of other trades into the unions ashore

TORNADO KILLS THREE, DAMAGE NEAR MILLION

War Plant Section of Canton Ripped by Winds, Trumbull County Town Ripped.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—At least three persons were dead and property damage totaling at least $1,000,000 was counted today in the path of a tornado and high wind storm which ripped through northeastern Ohio last night.

Apparently hardest hit were the war-plant section of Canton and the small village of Leavittsburg, three miles west of Warren in Trumbull county.

The Ohio Bell Telephone company reported communications completely disrupted in the stricken Canton area. Four war plants were forced to halt production because of storm damage while others were forced to curtail operations.

Leavittsburg, a village of 300 persons, was a mass of tangled wreckage. Nine homes there were demolished and a score of others were unroofed or twisted apart. Heavy trees, uprooted by the storm, fell o: several other homes and business establishments.

The Leavittsburg Feed mill, partially rebuilt following a fire two months ago, was flattened. An automobile containing William Eckenrode, his wife, their four small children and two other adults was picked up and hurled down an embankment. All eight required hospitalization.

The three known dead were the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCollum at Leavittsburgh; Mrs. Josephine Lowe, 64, at Vermilion in Erie county; and John Selby, 25, at Canton.

The storm struck Ohio frist in northeastern Defiance county and then hit at irregular spots along Lake Erie to Olmsted Falls, a southwestern suburb of Cleveland, before veering to Canton and thence eastward to the Pennsylvania border.

The body of the infant son of the McCollums at Leavittsburg was not found immediately in the wreckage of their home. Three other members of the family were rescued from the wreckage, but they were not badly injured. In all, 23 persons were treated in two Warren hospitals, eight of the more seriously injured remaining there today.

Mrs. Burton Backus, a Vermilion resident, was taken to a Lorain hospital in serious condition with injuries suffered when her home collapsed.

'TEN NIGHTS' PERFORMED FOR BIGGEST CROWD

Children's Theater Group Scores In Production Of Old Melodrama.

Playing before their largest audience—nearly 500 persons—the Children's Theater group ended its summer season last night with the presentation of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," at John Simpson auditorium.

Showing the benefit of the experience gained through the years, the cast performed in highly creditable fashion in a play that called, both in dialog and gestures, for exaggeration.

If there were any outstanding members of the cast, one would be young James Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Brown, who stepped into the part of Frank Slade, the innkeeper's son, on 24 hours notice after Donald DeSanze suffered an attack of appendicitis. Not only did Jimmy, who is 11, fill the role with ease and confidence, but he was practically letter-perfect in his lines.

Another would be Peggy Bayer as Mary Morgan, the drunkard's daughter, who did a convincing death scene despite her youth. Outstanding also were John Bishop, a veteran of the group, in the part of Sample Swichel, a swash-buckling tippler and dashing man-about-town. Also convincing was George Porterfield, in the role of the landlord of the Sickle and Sheaf inn, who fell victim of his own stock in trade, rum.

These members of the cast had the "fattest" parts, but they were ably supported by the other members, who were George Ridenour as Mr. Romaine, a philanthropist; Owen Hegarty as Willie, the son of Squire Hammond; William Gandert as Harvey Green, a gambler; Margaret Ann Lindley as Mrs. Slade; Doris Alverson as the drunkard's wife and Frankie Lane as Mehitable Cartwright, a sentimental Yankee girl.

Equally convincing was Dick DeSanze, who played the role of Joe Morgan, drunkard, who later reformed and came to be one of the town's respected citizens.

The play was staged in five acts and scenes were changed with a speed that was prima facie evidence of the ability of the backstage crews.

Between the acts, a Westinghouse quartet, composed of A. Van Auker, W. Wamphler, Lawrence Chamberlain and Max Williams, with Maurice Stretch at the piano, harmonized on old-time songs to the apparent delight of the audience. Another feature was the appearance of a group of tiny dancers from the Ethyl Battin Studio, featuring a solo dance by Sally Stoodt.

A children's matinee was presented yesterday afternoon.

Directing the players was Harold McCuen.

FCC DISCLAIMS RADIO BOSSISM

Chairman Denies Charges of Frightennig Stations, Praises Industry.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, today praised the work done by radio in war time and strongly denied that the government had any intention of taking over broadcasting.

Fly talked to reporters in a special news conference called to refute charges raised in the investigation of the FCC by the Cox congressional sub-committee.

"Radio has no cause for alarm," he said, "as long as it continues to do a decent job in the public interest. I'll oppose from beginning to end any move for the taking over of the radio industry. It is a vitally important medium in the preservation of free speech."

He flatly denied that his organization ever brought pressure to bear on some domestic foreign-language stations to remove any station personnel.

The Cox investigators, Fly said, "never will be able to prove any of the charges they have made; they are untrue."

He bitterly criticized the procedure of the committee which was told by an official of the office of censorship testified "that those broadcasters with whom I have come in contact are in fear of the FCC."

The official, Robert K. Richards, executive assistant of the O. of C., emphasized, however, that he could not speak for all radio stations, because he was "not acquainted with radio as a whole."

Books written by the "men who were there" are the subject of a new display on one of the bulletin boards in the public library. The books concern various battlefronts in the present war and among them are "Battle for the Solomons" by Ira Wolfert, and "Guadalcanal Diary" by Richard Tregaskis. Mrs. Lois Pennell, one of the librarians, is compiling a list of the books which will be available in a few days.

Approximately 30 children have projects on display.

Now that the trial is over Myers will probably be doing lots of sleeping to catch up.

OPA TO BOOST PRICE OF FLOUR

Will Subsidize Millers With Tax Funds to Keep Bread Cost at Present Level.

WASHINGTON—The OPA today disclosed that machinery is in motion to adjust the ceiling price on flour—a move long demanded by the senate wheat "bloc" led by Sen. Clyde Reed (R.), Kan.

An OPA spokesman said the announcement will be made Aug. 20—next Friday.

It was pointed out, however, that an increased ceiling for flour probably will not raise the retail price of bread. Instead, it is expected some sort of a subsidy will be paid along the line—probably to the millers—to absorb the rise, an CPA official said.

This disclosure coincided with the agriculture department's announcement of state wheat goals for 1944 totalling 68,000,000 acres and comparing with 54,149,000 acres harvested this year.

Earlier, the wheat state senators at a conference with War Food Administrator Marvin Jones demanded increases in the flour ceilings, warning that unless this was done, farmers would not plant the required acreage goals for 1944.

Wheat, with a parity price of $1.45, has been selling at about $1.24—21 cents below parity. The ceiling price on flour is 89 per cent of wheat parity. Wheat, meanwhile, is the only major food commodity now at below-parity prices.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—They're calling it "Paramount luck." Even though Veronica Lake twice was hospitalized for baby arrivals, both times she finished her then current film before the fact. Her latest hospital trip, resulting in premature birth of her son, came after a fall on the set—but she was there only for an added scene. The picture itself was completed.

Something to look for: Gertrude Lawrence in a movie about Sarah Bernhardt. She'd like to do it as a picture first even if she does it later on the stage . . . Her "Lady In the Dark" did sensational business here.

Dwight Taylor is now writing lines for Humphrey Bogart's "Conflict." Once Bogart, Taylor, Bill Brady the producer's son, and another kid were members of a boyhood band, all of whom wanted to be "tough." Acquiring a shiner or two was considered a prime mark of success. Taylor now relates the shock it was to the gang one day to learn that Bogart had become an actor. "He was the last person in the world I expected to go on the stage. He had often expressed his opinion of actors. They weren't tough."

Bogart made his debut in "The Cradle Snatchers" and the gang was on hand. Mary Boland and the late Edna Mae Oliver were playing jaded matrons in search of a thrill from young men.

"We were flabbergasted," recalls Taylor, "when Humphrey walked out on the stage as one of their thrill boys, wearing a delicately colored pair of Chinese pajamas. It was too much for us. We whistled cat-called and shouted, 'Hello, beautiful!' But he apparently knew what he was doing. He wasn't long wearing silk pajamas. Soon he was leveling a pistol and chilling the blood of audiences. He had left the rest of us behind. We had wanted to be tough, but he had already arrived."

Taylor himself gave up ambitions to "toughness" years ago. He's now a producer as well as a writer.

Screen fight of the year to date is not between fighter planes, battleships, or bombers. It's the gruelling hand-to-hand bout between Robert Ryan as an American and Mike Mazurki as a Jap wrestler in 'Behind the Rising Sun." Ryan bones Mazurki wrestles, grunts, kicks and tries mayhem.

The suspense is enough when taken as a straight physical battle, but it really climbs as it becomes a symbolic struggle between Japan and America—and their methods—before the eyes of Japanese officers and a few Americans in pre-war Tokyo. You can hear the bones barking.
